Fashion—from the drawing boards in Paris to Victoria?

Well, not quite.

But designers' whims have been lost to the imagination of the young—and the young at heart. No longer does the word "fashion" conjure up pictures of runways in Rome, drawing boards in Paris and elegant models in London.

Fashion has hit the streets. That's fashion's runway now. Imagination has become the drawing board and everyday people are the models.

Exhorbitant prices and limited style selection have resulted in a closet search and small shop chase to find the shirt, blouse, accessory or bag needed for that individual look.

Victoria, never noted as a fashion centre, has had years of experiment with fashion imagination.

Take Advantage

A quick noon-hour survey of the city centre on a sunny day shows that most people are taking advantage of today's fashion edicts, which in turn enhance city streets.

The working girl, in her 20s, rushing along crowded streets, clearly outclasses everyone else. With her colorful, stylish clothes, she quickly does away with that old "working girl" image.

Hot pants are plentiful, but usually they're reserved for those with svelte figures. Sunglasses, swinging shoulder bags and sharp shag hair cuts usually accompany these not-so-tight hot pant outfits.

Sunny, short dresses, sandals and scarves cover other working women under 30. Those interviewed said Vancouver and Seattle styles were more enticing than those in Victoria, but added that the situation here is improving.

Hippies, casually dressed youths and transients wore brightly colored clothes not suitable for an office, but comfortable in the sun and attractive on the streets.

Played Music

They walked, talked and played music, looking more comfortable than anyone else. Their babies were carried in vibrant papoose-style carriers, worn on the back or front of the mother.

T-shirts were a focal point. Striped or plain, they were all bold, revealing many obviously bra-less females.

Businessmen—young and old—displayed a keen fashion sense, too. Some wore lightweight, pale-colored suits, with bright shirts and wide ties. White shoes weren't scuffed or marked.

Tourist couples could be easily spotted by their notably bright sportshirts, Bermudas, shifts and, in many cases, large straw hats. Cameras are always a dead give-away.

London Chef Seeks 'Typical' Canadian Dish

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (P) — Silvino Trompetto, master of the Savoy Hotel kitchens, is off to Canada in August hoping he can bring back a typical Canadian dish for the gourmets of London's top-ranking hotel.

But what is typically Canadian?

"Maybe it will have something to do with maple syrup," said the starched-white maitre chef des cuisines in all innocence as he worried over his first venture into Canadian gastronomy.

The London-born Trompetto, whose ancestors dominated the kitchens of Italy, hopes to do a little lecturing and broadcasting in Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto, disclosing some of his own magic while picking up Canadian secrets.

Trompetto is not too sure what he will find. He figures that because of Quebec and the French influence, the standards of Canadian dining halls must have a strong Norman influence.

PREFERS CLASSICS

"Perhaps dishes will have garnishes of apple and cream and the food may be on the heavy side," he offered, none too sure of his ground.

His own leanings are towards the classics, the traditional recipes of Europe which have spread mainly from France which Trompetto, married to a Frenchwoman, maintains is still the true seat of food culture.

Supervising a taff of 20, Trompetto directs the production of perhaps up to 3,500 meals a day to Savoy guests. And then when he gets through a long day, he may slip off home to prepare a meal for his wife and 24-year-old son.

"I enjoy cooking," said the well-built chef with a characteristic face made more individualistic by a slightly misshapen nose.

As a child on London streets, he bashed his nose. But the skill of a surgeon restored the contours with almost the same mastery as Trompetto's own ability in the kitchen.

All the Savoy chefs are men. "Women," said Trompetto, "are good cooks but men are better in organization and stamina."

NO FROZEN FOOD

Every year hundreds of youngsters besiege him for a chance to learn in the Savoy kitchens. He picks those he considers the best, teaching while he supervises.

"Here at the Savoy we do not bother with modern ideas," he said. "We bring in our meat from Aberdeen and our vegetables from France. I do not believe in frozen food."

His own preference is for caviar and fish but he tries to design his dishes to fit the personalities of the guests. He tastes everything that is cooked in the kitchens and eats one complete meal a day in a little office off the main restaurant kitchen.

DEAR ABBY...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for three years (no children) and I just can't stand my husband anymore. Why does a woman lose her individuality when she gets married? I think the younger generation has the right idea. They live together for a while, and then decide whether they should marry. I wish my husband would do something to make up my mind for me. If I were told I had some fatal disease and had only a few years to live, I would walk out and enjoy life. I would have many affairs with different men and really enjoy it. My problem is, I don't have any fatal disease. — Wants Out.

DEAR ABBY: The above letter was written by my wife. I wasn't snooping. It was left in plain sight. For the last six months my wife has been distant and cold. I begged her to go to a counselor and even told her I would go with her but she said nothing was the matter. I love her very much and don't want her to leave me. What do you advise me to do? — Heartbroken husband.

DEAR HUSBAND: Your wife wrote a "Dear Abby" letter hoping (perhaps unconsciously) you'd find it. Tell her she is free to go. And she doesn't need a fatal disease to provide an excuse.

DEAR ABBY: My husband had a vasectomy two years ago. Three months later I was pregnant! Can you imagine how we felt with two kids in high school, one in college and a daughter about to be married?

When my husband went back to the doctor who performed it, he was reminded that he was instructed to return for a test to determine the success of the operation. Well, my husband didn't think it was necessary to return, so he can't blame the doctor.

Once in a blue moon the operation fails, so please advise men who have vasectomies to go back for the test before they take any foolish chances. — Lucky In L.A.

DEAR LUCKY: All chances are foolish. But I suppose some are more foolish than others. Thanks for the tip.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for three years and in all that time he has refused to wash out the bathub after himself. He feels that is a wife's duty! I told him I didn't expect him to get down on his hands and knees and scrub it as I do, I just wanted him to rinse it out. He refused.

Last night at a family gathering in our home, my husband was asked by my sister if he washed the tub out when he was single and living at home where his mother cleaned the house. His answer was, and I quote, "Yes, I washed the tub. Do you think I would have my nother get down on her hands and knees and clean my dirty bathub?"

Abby, where does that leave me? — Wife, Mother and Servant.

DEAR SERVANT: It leaves you on your hands and knees cleaning your husband's dirty bathub. Unless you refuse. And if you do, it might leave you with a very dirty bathub.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WHERE DID WE GO WRONG" IN WHEELING, W. VA.: From your letter I would say you did your best. Some parents "train up a child in the way he should go," and out of sheer rebellion, the child deliberately departs from it.

TODAY MEN ARE WORKING HARDER — AND DYING SOONER

How to Counteract the Stress and Strain of Business

● Never has the pace of big business been so fast or so killing. This is the last of three articles telling women how they can help keep men alive and well through the increasingly dangerous middle years.

By STELLA BRUCE

NEW YORK (WNS) — We've all seen him — the grey-faced, exhausted husband slumped in his armchair after "a terrible day at the office . . ." and we've thought to ourselves: if this is what chasing a promotion means, do we really want him to get his name on the boss's door?

Never has the pace of big business been so fast and so killing. Never since the days of sailing ships have businessmen been separated so much from their wives as they are today.

And it's no secret that many marriages can't stand the strain.

"The firm is taking the place of the 'other woman' in the so-called eternal triangle," says an industrial psychologist, "and latest studies have shown that work can now absorb up to 80 per cent of the time and energy of men in the executive bracket."

No wonder men are falling prey to the diseases of stress and strain in unprecedented numbers. No wonder firms are insisting that a meeting with the applicant's wife is an essential part of every interview for a top job.

They want to make sure that the embryo executive has a woman strong enough, sympathetic enough, to give him the help and support he undoubtedly will need.

Women Tougher

For women, as a race, are tougher than men. They may worry and nag, but they are far more adept at meeting stress and adjusting to trying living conditions.

They "roll with the punches" like boxers, while men usually take life's pummeling squarely on the chin. Under pressure and tension they fight harder and die sooner than their wives — about six years sooner in fact.

If men could only learn to handle stress without getting into such a state, they would take an important step in the right lifeline. And women, the experts agree, are the ones to help them.

You can, it seems, literally put years on your husband's life by simply helping him to counteract the stress and strain that modern business imposes on those with ambition.

Hard Way

Sometimes, men have to learn the hard way. A business consultant told me of a senior executive who suffered a nervous breakdown after months of working flat-out on a big development project.

"I went on leave to recover," the executive said, "but I couldn't sleep or even relax without the aid of drugs. Slowly I learned how to use will-power to get things into perspective.

"But it was only the help of my wife that really pulled me through."

Some companies realize only too well what the strain of modern business can do to a man. "We're ruining a lot of families," said the medical officer of a large industrial combine.

"Our welfare department offers psychiatric services, but we're not really geared to handle serious mental problems."

So it is the family — and particularly the wife — which is left with the job of keeping a businessman fit and happy. "If husband and wife can talk about the problems that work brings, they're at least halfway toward solving them," says an industrial psychologist.

He cites one case involving a young executive who decided to leave the house an hour early so that he could return before the children were in bed and spend some time with his complete family.

He promised

He also promised that he wouldn't work on Saturdays and that he wouldn't bring work home on more than two nights a week.

"One of the worst aspects of present-day high-pressure business is the resentment generated in wives who believe that husbands always put their work first regardless of the consequences," says Dr. Morton Begley, an industrial psychologist retained by several major firms.

"Certainly, the demands of executive status have increased relentlessly in recent years. Today's executives not only must work harder and longer at the office but they're also required to spend more time out of town.

"Indeed, one poll showed that the average executive can now spend up to 30 per cent if his working life on the road, which means he will be away some nights and his wife will have to manage on her own."

This tug-of-war between a man's loyalty to his family and his obligation to his job is becoming one of the major psychological problems of the 20th century.

Must Decide

"Early in the marriage a couple must decide on priorities," says Dr. Begley. "Is the husband to go all out for material success, thus neglecting his family? Or is he to limit his ambition and play a larger part in home life?

"If he chooses the latter course, it is then grossly unfair to the wife to complain of a lack of material possessions. But this does happen.

Another danger is the gap between husband and wife which can widen as he continues to rise in company circles.

In many cases, he is so driven by his work that he regards home primarily as some sort of rest centre in which he can recover from the relentless pressure of his work.

So what can a wife to to keep both a happy marriage and a stress-free husband? Primarily, to accept the sort of man he is and taylor family life to his basic qualities — and shortcomings.

Help him keep a sense of proportion. When he comes home at night limp with worry after a row with the boss, suggest — by example rather than words — that there is more to life than an office desk and a sheaf of sales reports.

Encourage Him

Encourage him to develop outside interests. Let him enjoy family life: he's playing his part by bringing in the money, so he shouldn't have to spend the entire weekend with his hands in the sink.

Suggest a few simple relaxation exercises. For instance, get him to lie on his back with hands at his sides, and eyes closed. Ask him to direct his attention to wriggling his toes!

After a few seconds of this, the focal point of attention should gradually come up the less, through the body, until it is level with the face.

Resting lazily in this state, the body will surrender to feelings of physical heaviness. This is called "deep relaxation," used by mystics as the first stage in acquiring their extraordinary powers of mental control.

Relaxation is not easy. It needs to be learned but it's well worth the effort. A short session every day can help relieve the tension on which ulcers, migraine, and a variety of nervous disorders thrive and prosper.

Gloomy Lot

Husbands are a gloomy lot. By your own lighthearted approach to life show yours that there's more in the world than bills, promotion prospects and life insurance.

"I remind my businessman patients," says a doctor specializing in industrial stress, "that the Coronary Medal of Honor is too easily won to make it really worth the effort."

Yet Coronary Medals are being dished out in frightening numbers every day of the week. It's up to you and me to see that the names of our husbands aren't on them.

Big Claims Expected

EDMONTON (CP) — Agriculture Minister H. A. Ruste said Thursday government insurance payments to central Alberta farmers who sustained crop losses in a severe hailstorm last week are expected to total nearly $2 million.

More than 1,000 claims have been received so far and more are expected, the minister said.

The Alberta hail studies group at Penhold said the storm was probably the worst since the early 1950s and predicted that crop and property damage could exceed $10 million.

Ruste said his department is still surveying the damage.

He said an estimated 70 per cent of the farmers in the storm area had some kind of insurance coverage.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — There was a fair trade on the grain exchange today as prices at the close became a little more buoyant.

The July future in rapeseed dipped the maximum 15 cents under liquidation pressure on the last trading day, but recovered toward the close.

All commodities had buying by locals and commission houses.

Volume of trade Thursday was 886,000 bushels of flax, 664,000 of rye and 2,552,000 bushels of rapeseed.

N-TEST BACKED AS QUAKE HITS

Times News Services

A moderate earthquake was recorded this morning in the vicinity of Amchitka Island in the Aleutians, it was reported by the Palmer Observatory in Alaska.

And in Washington the U.S. Congress Thursday night rejected an effort to block a five-megaton underground nuclear test scheduled for this fall on Amchitka.

The blast is to test the warhead of the Safeguard Spartan anti-missile system.

An observatory spokesman said the quake registered 5.2 on the Richter scale and was centred at Shemya Island, about 250 miles from Amchitak.

There were no reports of damage or injury.

Opponents of the Amchitka test claim the explosion of the large nuclear device could trigger a major earthquake causing devastation on the west coast of Canada and the United States and the islands of Hawaii.

Air Crash Kills 162

Worst Aviation Disaster

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese jetliner with 162 persons aboard and a Japanese jet fighter collided over Northern Japan today and crashed in what appeared to be the worst disaster in aviation history.

The pilot of the F-86F Sabre fighter parachuted to safety, but the national police said there was little or no hope of any survivors from the Boeing 727 airliner.

The airline, All Nippon Airways, said only one foreigner was aboard the big jet, the American flight engineer, Donn M. Carpenter of Detroit. He had been flying for the line since February, 1970.

By nightfall, police said, 42 bodies had been recovered in a mountainous area about 200 miles northeast of Tokyo.

A piece of the tail section of the plane was found, and the bodies recovered were badly mangled. Shortly after darkness fell, police said other parts of the airliner, including a piece of the fuselage, had been found.

Search and rescue workers planned to push through the rough terrain throughout the night in the virtually hopeless search for survivors. There were 2,000 self-defence troops, 621 national police and 24 helicopters assigned to the task.

Premier Eisaku Sato cut short a brief vacation to meet with officials investigating the disaster.

HALTS TRAINING

The air self-defence force said it had ordered a temporary halt in training flights while the investigations are going on. Keikichi Masuhaka, director-general of the self-defence agency, expressed apologies for the collision and condolences to the families of the victims.

The airliner was on an afternoon flight to Tokyo from Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island. It had 155 passengers, including a 10-month-old baby, and a crew of seven aboard, the airline said.

Most of the passengers were returning from a tour

HOTTEST DAY OF THE YEAR

Victoria was hot Thursday — hotter than any other day of the year so far and the hottest July day since 1965.

The thermometer soared to 88 at the Victoria International Airport, toppling Monday's 86, the previous high for the year.

Westerly winds in the Strait of Juan de Fuca are expected to cool temperatures for the next two days — but not much. The temperature is still expected to nudge the 80-degree mark. Early morning fog patches can be expected along the Victoria coastline.

Thursday was a hot day in Nanaimo with the temperature hitting 95. In Comox it was 89 degrees, Port Hardy 78 and Kamloops experienced 99 degrees.

Apollo Pair Heading For Moon Adventure

HOUSTON (AP) — After one abortive separation attempt, two Apollo 15 astronauts successfully cast off their lunar module Falcon from the command ship today and headed for man's riskiest moon landing in a boulder-strewn basin ringed by 15,000-foot mountains and a gaping canyon.

"Good clean sep," Commander David R. Scott reported as the two ships moved apart.

"You're on your own," Alfred M. Worden told Scott and James B. Irwin as they drifted away.

Until the second attempt was successful there was high drama and tension for more than 20 minutes as the two spaceships circled the moon.

Scott and Irwin first attempted the separation behind the moon and out of radio contact.

But when they came around the edge of the moon the ships were still locked firmly nose-to-nose.

"Houston, this is Falcon. We did not get a separation," Commander Scott announced.

NO ELECTRICITY

Mission Control immediately calculated that the docking probe had not received the electrical power needed to unlatch.

Worden removed a hatch and climbed into the connecting tunnel between the two craft. He reported the electrical umbilical cord was loose. He tightened it and power flowed to the probe.

After the two ships manoeuvred to the proper attitude, Mission Control gave

UN SEAT FOR PEKING

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp today voiced doubt, in a discussion with Chinese ambassador Huang Hua, that the United States can block Peking's admission to the United Nations this fall.

He told the newly-arrived envoy that from their calculations Canadian authorities are "not sure" the U.S. could obtain a majority for the so-called important question resolution used in the past to help keep the Communist regime out.

HYDRO NOT OPTIMISTIC

B.C. Hydro and Power Authority says the level of income reached with a $16 million profit last year can't be maintained in the future because of steadily rising costs.

In its annual report released today, the provincial crown corporation revealed that increased sales of electricity to residential customers and increased electricity rates resulted in an $18 million increase in revenue from that source.

Residential sales of electricity accounted for $78 million of the $277 million gross revenue.

The report doesn't specify how much money Hydro can expect to make in the years ahead, except that it will be less than last year.

Premier Bennett said earlier this week that he doesn't see any further Hydro electricity rate increases as long as the utility can operate at a profit. Hydro lost $400,000 two years ago, prior to increasing its rates.

Bennett revealed Hydro's profit earlier this week.

French Crash Claims 37

PAU, France (AP) — A French air force transport plane caught fire and crashed in flames today killing 37 persons aboard, including 30 paratroop officers, air force headquarters reported.

The plane, a twin-engine Nord 2501, went down just as the troops were about to begin a jump exercise, the communique said.

"According to the first reports, fire broke out on board and the aircraft, after requesting priority to land, crashed trying to reach the airfield."

Listed as dead are 30 officers, four jump masters and three members of the flight crew.

Doctors Debate Counter Action

By DON VIPOND

Doctors who represent their colleagues throughout British Columbia will decide in a week how hard they will attack the provincial government in a dispute over hospital privileges.

A cross-section of 35 doctors at a special meeting in Vancouver Thursday night voiced proposals ranging from "do nothing" to "withdrawal of services" — a strike.

The meeting was called by the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons, the doctors' licencing body, to sample the mood of physicians on new powers granted Health Minister Ralph Loffmark this week.

An order-in-council made public Tuesday gives Loffmark the authority to grant, restrict or deny a doctor hospital privileges. This power had previously belonged to the board of each hospital which usually accepted the recommendation of a doctors' credentials committee.

NO WAY

Without hospital privileges, a doctor has no way to handle patients who require hospitalization other than referring them to another doctor who has privileges.

Dr. W. G. McClure, registrar of the college, said from Vancouver today that out of Thursday night's meeting has come a decision to call an emergency meeting of the council of the college, 11 members elected from districts. It will be held in Vancouver, Aug. 7.

The council in turn may decide to call an emergency meeting of British Columbia's 3,300 doctors. Or it might decide to let the issue rest until the college's annual meeting in October, said McClure.

CATCH MOOD

At the Thursday night meeting, which he said was to catch the mood of doctors by tapping a cross-section, opinions on what action to take ranged from ultra-conservative to radical — "from we should do nothing to we should withdraw our services."

The B.C. division of the Canadian Medical Association announced earlier that it will hold an emergency meeting in Vancouver Aug. 6. The Victoria Medical Society, representing close to 300 local doctors, will meet Tuesday to instruct its delegates attending that meeting.

Loffmark has claimed he will use his new powers to effect a better distribution of new doctors throughout the province, countering their concentration in Vancouver, Victoria and the Okanagan.

McClure denied today there

Nixon Welcome But . . .

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said today Chinese leaders told him that unless President Nixon is prepared to make significant concessions there could hardly be any beneficial results from his trip to Peking.

Stanfield was talking to reporters on his arrival here after a six-day visit to China, during which he met acting Foreign Minister Chi Peng-fei and Kuo Mo-jo, vice-chairman of the National People's Congress, China's parliament.

The Progressive Conservative party leader said both officials outlined at considerable length and force China's position on relations with the United States.

"It was emphasized to me that President Nixon would be welcome to visit Peking, but unless he is prepared to make significant concessions, there would hardly be any beneficial results from the visit," he said.

Stanfield said the Chinese placed great emphasis on the question of Taiwan, home of 14 million Nationalist Chinese, which Peking has pledged to "liberate."

Vancouver Police 'Unable' To Control Drug Abuse

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chief Constable John Fisk said Thursday the police force can do little to fight Vancouver's increasing drug addiction problem.

He told the city police commission the force can only help control the situation and act as a limited deterrent.

"We must look to our sociologists and medical people and others in related fields to take the kind of action necessary to combat the causes and effects of this major social problem," Chief Fisk said.

In a statement to the commission, he said he felt it timely to comment on the drug problem in Vancouver in view of recent developments.

He said Vancouver's history of hard drug abuse dates back to the turn of the century, with the smoking of opium by a few Chinese immigrants.

ACTIVITIES KNOWN

He said their activities were known, that the practice was apparently not considered to be a threat to the health of the community at that time.

"However," Chief Fisk added, "it would appear that within a few years there was an increased demand for more refined drugs.

"Since that time, Vancouver has been faced with a major hard drug problem.

"By 1950, the number of heroin addicts in Vancouver was estimated at 500 and at this time it is estimated that there are some 4,000 hard drug addicts in Vancouver."

Chief Fisk said trends for the first half of 1971 indicate there will probably be about 600 persons arrested for possession of heroin by the end of the year, compared with 383 last year.

ORGANIZED

"The distribution of hard drugs in Vancouver is controlled by several highly-organized groups with connections for the most part in eastern Canada," the police chief said.

"Some four or five years ago the introduction of soft drugs to the local scene added considerably to our total drug problem.

"The number of persons arrested and charged with possession and trafficking in soft drugs has accelerated rapidly over the past few years and is an indication of the growth of the problem."

If present trends continue, the chief said, close to 1,200 persons will have been arrested by the end of the year for possession of soft drugs compared to only 198 four years ago.

PROFITS LIMITED

"Although there is obviously some organization in respect of securing and distributing soft drugs, the hard drug criminal group have to our knowledge not involved themselves in this field, and this, no doubt for a number of reasons, including the fact that the profits are relatively limited."

He said continued enforcement has resulted in a considerable number of arrests but repeated that enforcement alone could not solve the problem.

ANTI-DRUG PATROLS SOUGHT FOR PARKS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city parks board decided Thursday to ask city council and the police commission to add at least 10 specially trained officers to the police youth detail in an attempt to curb use of drugs by juveniles in city parks.

The board also passed resolutions calling for an investigation into the possibility of park curfews, legislation against the inhalation of noxious vapors such as airplane glue, and more forceful attempts to charge the parents of young habitual drug users with criminal negligence.

PRIVATE DRUG USER 'PAYING A PREMIUM'

TORONTO (CP) — Consumers who pay privately for prescription drugs shouldn't have to pay more than those who receive drugs from hospital and government sources, says the Commission on Pharmaceutical Services.

"We think the prices to consumers who buy privately should be lower in many cases," a spokesman for the commission said today.

He cited the tranquillizer valium, which hospitals and governments get free, but which costs the consumer $8.44 per 100 capsules if he buys it in a drug store.

In a 500-page report released Thursday, the commission says the consumer who pays privately is in effect subsidizing the one who receives drugs from hospital and government sources.

(The value of prescription drugs dispensed has risen from $30 million a year in 1940 to $300 million in 1970).

The recommendation is one of 97 included in the report by the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association which sponsored the three-year-study at a cost of $160,000.

The eight-member commission was headed by John B. Macdonald, executive director of the Council of Ontario Universities and formerly president of the University of British Columbia.

The report stated there had been a decline of more than 200 in the number of pharmacies in Canada between 1962 and 1969, with Ontario showing the greatest drop.

If the trend continues, the report said, more communities will be left without the services of a pharmacy "which could impede the availability of drugs to the public."

The report also said that advertising of prescription services and prices reduces the dispensing of prescription drugs to a merchandising basis and "tends to eventually lower the standards of the service both quantitatively and qualitatively."

The commission recommended

- Compulsory continuing education for pharmacists as a condition for retaining a licence.
- Stringent regulations governing pharmacy licences throughout Canada to ensure that policies and practices reflect the public interest.
- Exclusion of ownership of a pharmacy by a physician or the licensing of a physician as a pharmaceutical chemist.
- Physical separation within a drug store of the area in which drugs are dispensed.
- Continuing study of manpower requirements because of rising demands, an aging population of retail pharmacists and the entry of more women into the field.

Sadat Wants Search For Peace Continued

By United Press International

Assistant U.S. secretary of state, Joseph J. Sisco, brought word from Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to Israeli Premier Golda Meir today that Sadat wants to continue efforts to reach an interim Middle East peace agreement.

Six Arab leaders met in Tripoli, Libya, to consider ways of forcing King Hussein to temper his tough attitude toward Palestinian guerrillas in Jordan.

Political sources in Cairo said the most likely outcome of the summit meeting would be political or economic sanctions against Jordan or acceptance or guarantees from Jordan that guerrillas would be allowed freedom of action.

Sisco, pursuing American peace-making efforts in the Middle East, met Foregin Minister Abba Eban in Jerusalem for 40 minutes and then spent three hours talking with Mrs. Meir.

CONVICTS ALLOWED WEEKEND VISITS

OTTAWA (CP) — More liberal rules designed to increase the contact between prisoners in federal penitentiaries and outside society were announced today by Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer.

Under the directive, visits between prisoners and their families on evenings, weekends and statutory holidays are to be encouraged. Opportunity will be provided for families to participate more frequenty in such activities as church services, graduation ceremonies and sports events.

Logging Curbs Extended

Partial curtailment of logging and other industrial activity was extended at midnight Thursday to include all of Vancouver forest district and most of Prince Rupert district.

B.C. Forest Service has imposed early shift requirements in the two districts, in which many logging operators were already shut down because of extreme fire hazard.

The latest order applies to all of Prince Rupert district except for the Stikine River basin and Yukon border.

With 32 new outbreaks of fire, there are now 157 blazes, two of them out of control as wind and lighting continue to frustrate firefighting efforts by 802 men, 42 bulldozers and 24 air tankers.

The worst fire, covering more than 120,000 acres in Prince George forest district north of Fort Nelson, was buffeted by winds up to 35 miles an hour, and remains uncontrolled.

That outbreak, and a 22,000-acre fire near Ingenika River northwest of Lake Williston, are burning largely in brush and scrub.

Lightning strikes account for many fires, especially in Prince Rupert and Kamloops districts, the forest service said. There are no fires on Vancouver Island.

Ferry Talks Set

Union and management were meeting today to try to iron out a dispute at B.C. Ferries.

Strike votes, distributed earlier this week by the marine branch (unlicensed) of the B.C. Government Employees Union to its 1,600 members, were to be counted later today.

Norman Thornber, business agent for the marine branch, said the meeting was arranged after management said "they are prepared to meet at our convenience."

Ferry workers are objecting to regulations issued April 17 which the union said lump absenteeism of all kinds, including leaves of absence and days off without pay, in with sick leave.

Two hundred workers have received letters saying they could be fired if they are absent in the next six months, the union said.

Welfare Cheques Counterfeit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police arrested 10 persons Thursday after scores of counterfeit $95 city welfare cheques were cashed at banks, supermarkets, department stores and hotels in what police and welfare authorities described as a tightly-organized operation.

Harcourt McLean, assistant director of the Vancouver social welfare department, said 40 of the cheques were presented at one bank branch alone. There is no estimate of the number of phoney cheques still uncashed he said.

He described them as almost-perfect counterfeits, except for the fact that all carried the same serial number—242453—and were dated July 29. The regular welfare cheques this week were all dated July 28.

Mr. McLean said persons cashing the cheques presented false welfare department identification cards.

Police said one of the men arrested carried written instructions to cash the cheques before banks opened at 10 a.m. and police said they were working on theassumption that one ing on the assumption that one thing.

The first arrests were made after a cashier at a department store became suspicious when she noticed the identical serial numbers on two cheques presented for cashing. The cashier contacted Mr. McLean, who informed police.

Borrowing Approved

School district borrowing totalling $7 million has been approved by the provincial government.

Of the total, $300,000 is allocated to the Greater Victoria school district. The interest rate on the bonds is 7.08 per cent.

The cabinet also approved $10 million in Pacific Great Eastern railway borrowing at an interest rate not to exceed 7.66 per cent.

. . . DOCTORS

"Distribution has improved markedly during the past five years . . . and there has been no great clamor coming out of those communities."

There have been a few "hot spots" but these are communities where there are barely enough people and no facilities to attract a doctor, he said.

Meanwhile, a heart surgery specialist who was denied access to cardiac facilities at Vancouver General Hospital said Thursday Loffmark had his case in mind when he took on his new powers.

Dr. George Stefanik, who applied two years ago to join the open-heart surgery team at the hospital, said the health minister's new authority is aimed at breaking the cliques that control surgeries in major hospitals.

Rumour had been rife in medical circles that the case was a factor in Loffmark's move but the health minister insists that he does not plan to use his new powers to get hospital privileges for doctors who are now denied them.

He said the priority is to restrict hospital privileges in major urban centres in order to persuade more doctors to set up practice in more remote areas.

But the credentials committee, a group of doctors reporting on applications for hospital privileges to the hospital board is apparently already doing this in the case of the Vancouver General. There is a waiting list of 32 doctors.

There are now 741 doctors with privileges at that hospital and the number is being curtailed because it is already administratively unwieldy.

Beer Imports Allowed In Strike-Lockout

First shipments of bottled beer from outside the province began arriving in mainland B.C. areas this weekend to help offset the strike-lockout of breweries in Vancouver.

Liquor Control Board chairman William Bruce said today he expects some shipments might arrive in lower mainland areas Saturday, depending on shipping speeds.

The beer is being imported on provincial government orders from Uncle Ben's brewery in Winnipeg, Carlings in Calgary and Edmonton, and the Olympia brewery in the state of Washington.

Bruce said the beer will be used to keep Liquor Control Board outlets stocked. It would have little or no effect on mainland taverns staggered by the shortage.

BOTTLED BEER

Government action began Thursday when an order-in-council gave Prince George brewer Ben Ginter clearance to bring in bottled beer from his Winnipeg brewery or from the U.S., if necessary.

Ginter expects 60,000 cases to arrive in B.C. Monday morning and he has made provision for an additional 20,000 to arrive each day thereafter until the strike-lockout concludes.

"The LCB haven't asked for draught," he said today. "If they had, there would be 150,000 gallons on the way from Manitoba by now."

A spokesman for the Vancouver Beverage Dispensers Union in Vancouver says his group was not striking against the public and welcomes the idea of importing beer.

About 300 union members are laid off as a result of a Brewery and Soft Drink Workers union strike at Labatt brewery in New Westminster on July 19. Molsons in Vancouver locked out 109 members of the same local the next day.

Locally only three hotels have been affected by the shortage and they are all attempting to remain open.

Goldstream Inn ran out of draught Thursday night and a spokesman said hours will be staggered as long as supplies last, although he had no idea of the hours involved at this stage.

"How long our supplies last depends on how much of our regular weekly order we receive next Thursday," he said.

Under an LCB directive parlors may not increase orders without a period of advance warning, but he said it's quite conceivable to receive less than the amount ordered because of the strike.

The Kings Hotel ran out of draught Tuesday and has gone on staggered hours (10 a.m. to 6 p.m.) hoping to last it out.

At the Gorge Hotel, meanwhile, a "fair supply" of bottled beer remains after the establishment ran out of draught Monday.

sponsored by the Yoshiwara Bereaved Family Association, composed of relatives of soldiers killed in the Second World War.

All Nippon Airways said it received an emergency signal from the airliner and then contact was lost.

A military spokesman said the fighter broke into pieces, but the pilot, a sergeant, managed to bail out. He was taken to a hospital and was found to be uninjured, the spokesman said.

The pilot of a fighter in the area reported that he saw the two planes plunging toward the earth from an altitude of about 26,000 feet. He said they were trailing smoke and then disappeared.

A schoolteacher near the crash area reported a plane flew over streaking white smoke and then he heard what sounded like a "thunder burst." Moments later he saw a "rain of debris" falling on a nearby mountain.

Officials of the airline said the weather was clear at the time.

It was Japan's second airline crash this month. On July 3, a locally-built YS-11 of the Japanese TOA Airlines crashed into a mountain in the northern part of the country, killing all 68 persons aboard.

The world's worst previous aviation disaster was the crash of a Venezuelan DC-9 jetliner March 16, 1969, off Maracaibo, in which 155 persons were killed.

Japan's worst previous crash occurred Feb. 4, 1966, when another All Nippon Boeing 727 crashed into Tokyo Bay, killing 133 persons. In the next month two other airliners—one flown by Canadian Pacific Airlines and one by British Overseas Airways Corp.—crashed in the Tokyo area, bringing the toll within 31 days to 321 dead.

Farmer Bids Low

Farmer Construction of Victoria had the lowest bid of three opened Thursday at 4 p.m. by the Capital Region's hospital board for the addition of 20 beds and other work at the Lady Minto Hospital, Ganges.

The company's base bid was $238,400. It also presented a total tender of $304,566 which would cover the additional rooms, a new road, a parking lot, changes in transformer, plumbing and electrical facilities and construction of an elevator.

The total bid was slightly under the architect's estimate of $305,000.

Other tenders were submitted by Cana Construction and Condor Construction.

Worden pushed a button and the manoeuvre was successful.

That was 25 minutes after the original separation try. Had the manoeuvre been delayed another 15 minutes, the astronauts probably would have had to change their landing time because of a shortage of time to check all systems properly. But Mission Control reported that time remained right on schedule.

The moon-circling astronauts earlier beamed to earth a striking televised picture of the landing site and then boosted their ship into a slightly higher orbit to help assure a pinpint landing.

SAW CRATERS, BOULDERS

As Apollo 15 zipped within 30,000 feet of the peaks of the Apennines, television viewers caught a brief climpse of the rugged terrain and knew why the landing attempt would be tricky. The site is pocked with craters and larger boulders.

Scott said that despite the rough appearance, he spotted many areas smooth enough for a touchdown.

Stray Feathers

By HAROLD HOSFORD

By HAROLD HOSFORD

To think, he'd never even seen a "real live" steam engine before last year. Now he's got a flamin' love affair going for those old clanking, panting hulks of the great days of railroadin'. And him only six years old!

It's the son, Patrick I'm speakin' of, the first in line to the Hosford succession. He's nuts about engines — steam engines — and I guess I'm to blame.

Back in the Winnipeg days of the Hosford clan, I used to trundle ol' Pat around to every railway yard, depot and level crossing I could find on a Sunday morning. I was acting on the assumption that I'd never be able to make a naturalist out of him if I tried to push the natural history kick too hard.

LITTLE TIDBITS

So subtly, I thought, I'd feed little tidbits to him about the wild things we'd encounter on our rambles — sure you can find wild things in a railway yard — while he poked and ferreted around old box cars and rusting relics of the days of steam.

Well, after all these years of carefully nurturing a love for nature, I've discovered the whole idea was a flop. I don't think he heard a word I said, at least not about sparrows and pigeons and rabbits and things.

But engines, well that's another matter. I warn you, if you're ever visiting our house be prepared for an ear-bending from Pat. He won't give up until he's filled you in on everything from side-arms to couplings to cowcatchers.

But Pat's love affair with the Iron Horses has created certain difficulties when it comes to planning an outing for the Hosfords. When the meeting is thrown open for suggestions, sure as your hat, Pat'll come up with a trip to the Johnson Street Bridge. After all, there might just be a train leaving. Even if it is pulled by a diesel Pat'll be happy.

This dutiful-father bit may be all right for some guys but let me tell you, after six years of walking the rails I'm tired of hearing about trains. And last week I put my foot down. No more Sunday outings to Johnson Street. This time we'd try something different.

RESIGNED

To make a long story short, several suggestions of mine were quickly shot down and always by the same vote. Dad, for; Pat and Mom against. Never able to garner more than a third of the popular vote, I resigned myself to whatever devilish scheme those two plotters could come up with.

With visions of engines, hundreds of 'em, steaming through my head, and Pat chattering happily at my side, and Mom sitting self-satisfied in the back seat, we made it over the 'Hat.

WARBLING WELCOME

It was a petulant elder Hosford that wheeled the car off the highway and into the Forest Museum parking lot. But hardly had the motor stopped when things took a turn for the better, for dad. A yellow warbler was part of the welcoming committee and his boisterous song went completely unnoticed by the rest of the Hosfords.

Paying my money and preparing to take my chance I started to take more notice of what was going on around me. Sure, there were engines; a couple of doubtful ancestry but one grand old shay panting patiently in the station, waiting to whisk us away to forest museum land.

BIRDS TOO

But, wonders of wonders, there were trees and birds and flowers and even a shady walk through the woods. Enough to gladden the heart of any would-be naturalist.

Here at last, was the answer to the Hosford family outings. Dad could pursue his favorite hobby, Pat could live it up in whatever kinds of engine caught his fancy and Mom could do what she does best, and apparently loves to do. That is, keep an eye on Pat.

OWN WAY

For the next four hours each Hosford went his or her own way, meeting occasionally to exchange such pleasantries as "where's the toilet" or "can I have a dime for some ice cream."

One such encounter surprised both Pat and mother Hosford. Did their collective eyes deceive them or was Dad really showing an interest in things forestry?

They had been deceived. My interest in a great old log on a thing called a pole railway had nothing to do with logging, or forestry, or railways. That old log contained something far more interesting, at least to me.

SPOTTED WREN

I'd been standing staring at that log for some time when a small bird seemed to fly right into the end of it. The bird turned out to be a bewick's wren which had flown into its nest in the rotting wood under the bark of the log.

It was the first bewick's wren's nest I'd ever seen and to think I'd found it myself. This, on top of all the other things natural I'd found while poking around the Forest Museum convinced me that the next time the Hosfords have a palaver to ose a palce for an outin I'll be voting for Duncan.

FDA Admits Unauthorized Drug Allowed

By MORTON MINTZ

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration acknowledged Thursday that for at least four years it has allowed large-scale distribution of an anti-cancer medicine for an unauthorized use.

The result is that dermatologists, without the FDA approval required by law, routinely prescribed the medicine for a skin disease known as psoriasis.

The FDA said the drug, trade-named Methotrexate (MTX), has been associated with at least 16 deaths in the United States and 9 elsewhere, all from use in psoriasis.

In addition, the manufacturer, Lederle Laboratories, has reported a total of 71 different adverse effects, including blood, kidney and liver disease, and three different types of ulcers.

Almost every body system shows adverse effects from MTX, James D. Grant, deputy commissioner of the FDA, told the House intergovernmental relations subcommittee.

Among the first 984 patients treated, 259, or 26 per cent, suffered at least one side effect according to the Lederle, a division of American Cyanamid Co. The number of Americans using MTX for psoriasis is unknown, but is estimated by FDA physicians to be at least 100,000.

Psoriasis can be disabling in severe cases. The disease makes the skin scaly and often produced reddish-silvery patches on the elbows, knees and chest.

The FDA approved MTX in 1953 for leukemia and later for two forms of cancer. That physicians prescribe it for a disease in which Lederle has not shown it to be safe and effective is "anomalous and apparently dangerous," subcommittee chairman L. H. Fountain (D—N.C.) said.

The agency agreed that MTX, because of its widespread use to treat psoriasis, is legally misbranded. The drug law prohibits interstate shipment of misbranded drugs, the agency conceded.

If the MTX case sets a precedent, Fountain warned, it "could well undermine enforcement" of the law.

Grant, emphasizing the sensitivity of the issue, pointed out that doctors commonly prescribe drugs for unapproved uses. He cited methadone. Approved as a cough medicine and painkiller, it is the principal agent for long term maintenance treatment of heroin addicts.

Meter Maids Lose Job; Too Pretty

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Two pretty young parking meter maids dismissed July 13 have lost the latest round in their battle to get their jobs back.

But Maria Mammoliti, 19, and Penny Collier, 18, vowed Thursday they were not going to take the loss sitting down.

The girls said after they were dismissed that city engineer William Taylor told them they were "too young and pretty" to be meter maids.

They took their case to city council earlier this month and, armed with a 650-signature petition from Guelph residents supporting them, asked for their jobs back.

Guelph council referred the matter to the parking authority.

Thursday, they received a formal letter from J. H. Brown, the parking authority chairman upholding Mr. Taylor's action.

The letter gives no reason for the dismissals but concentrates on the fact that the girls were in touch with the press before the authorities.

"You have appealed to your press media, the public, through a petition and to city council before coming to your employer, the parking authority," the letter says.

Miss Mammoliti said the authority was most angry because of the publicity received. "They dislike it," she said.

She said she and Miss Collier will appeal to city council at the Aug. 9 meeting because council still has to approve the authority's action.

The Billionaires

THE DEBTLESSNESS OF BRITish Columbia, one of Premier Bennett's most characteristic and long-sustained boasts, increased beyond the $2.5 billions mark in the last financial year — a boost of more than $220 millions over 1969-70. As Mr. Bennett never tires of pointing out, this is not debt owed directly by the province, but borrowings by subsidiary agencies — the PGE, B.C. Hydro, the Ferry Authority, school districts and similar entities — whose repayment is guaranteed by the provincial government.

The debt may not be a direct liability of the provincial government, but it is a direct liability of the people of British Columbia who would have to pay it if the various agencies became unable to do so. That is not likely, of course, except in the event of a drastic collapse of the economy, for the borrowing agencies are largely revenue-producing and the debt, as provincial statements describe it, is self-liquidating. The fact remains, however, that the people of the province are backing a debt of more than $2.5 billions and it is getting larger every year despite Mr. Bennett's claim that "the province, itself, has, of course, not borrowed any sums since August 1, 1952."

The debt picture provides an appropriately impressive background for the annual British Columbia financial and economic review released this week, with its increased income, increased expenditures and increased surplus. With the province now running on a budget in the $ 1.25-billion bracket, Mr. Bennett's surpluses appear less spectacular in comparison, but he continues to amass them as a matter of policy regardless of Keynesian principles or any other theories concerning the manipulation of the economy to achieve inflationary or anti-inflationary effects.

No one can argue that the province is not in impressive financial shape, even though extensive self-financing through internal funds may sometimes give the impression of a snake eating its tail. Mr. Bennett's abilities as a finance minister have become widely known, and the so-far inexhaustible riches of British Columbia have provided the necessary foundation for large-scale government investment and development.

The other side of the coin may be seen in the stringent circumstances of many of our cultural efforts. The libraries, art galleries and other educational institutions developed in some communities on this continent show what can be done by governments for that part of life which is becoming increasingly essential in a world pushed farther and farther along the computerized, chromium-paved road to progess.

However, Mr. Bennett has produced a happy report for our centennial year. Given the people and the vast natural wealth of British Columbia, how else should it be?

Bob Mayhew

COUNTLESS PERSONS WHO benefited from his unostentatious kindnesses have occasion today to remember the services Robert Wellington (Bob) Mayhew performed for this community and for Canada. His death, at 90, closes a chapter of quiet efficiency in public life that took him from the ranks of a successful businessman, through industrial achievements, to high office in the federal cabinet and the nation's ambassadorial ranks.

His interest in and efforts on behalf of his fellow men were early exhibited in his activities as a leading figure in the non-political life of Greater Victoria. A life-long supporter of the YMCA, he gave it much of his time before entering public office, as a council member and reeve of Oak Bay. Later, while federal Liberal member for Victoria, he attained wide recognition for his devotion to matters of concern to all citizens, regardless of party.

With cabinet rank, he followed the same course of close attention to the needs of Canadians that he had shown for residents of his adopted home here. As Minister of Fisheries he helped to draft the International North Pacific Fisheries Commission pact formalizing conservation efforts by Canada, the United States and Japan off this coast.

For such accomplishments, and for the warmth of his welcome to Canadians visiting Japan during his term as ambassador, he will be widely remembered and respected. In this city, where he remained "Bob" Mayhew to all men, the memories will be more personal — of a man who always found time to offer a helping hand, with the ability to make that help effective.

High Hazard

MIDWAY THROUGH THE SUMmer vacation season, the lower part of Vancouver Island has escaped serious forest fires. What small outbreaks have occurred have been quickly contained.

Several factors have contributed to the favorable record so far this year. A damp June kept the woods and wild land reasonably moist. And the lightning fires which have plagued other sections of the province have not occurred in this region.

The hot weather of the past three weeks, however, has raised the hazard in this locality. The danger point has been reached and each warm day makes the danger more acute.

Under these circumstances, the people of Vancouver Island are put to the test to see how effectively they have learned forest protection lessons, how careful they can be with smoking materials, and what fires they may safely use out of doors.

Some fires are not caused by people, but a large number are. We must see, at this time of year, that we take no risks that jeopardize our forests.

Dictator's Bequest

SINCE HIS BREAK WITH THE Soviet Union in 1948 Marshal Tito has come to occupy an extraordinary place in international affairs. As the first Communist state to break clear of Moscow-dictated Communism, Yugoslavia was cultivated by the West. Tito himself has travelled an erratic course between East and West, one year settling the Trieste problem with the West and the next affirming the principle of "co-existence" with the Russians.

The Marshal, at age 79, is thinking of retirement and the political problem in Belgrade revolves around the means to sustain "Titoism" past the president's retirement and death. There is to be a collective leadership in the federal state of Yugoslavia with the presidency rotating among the leaders of the federation, as in Switzerland.

The numerous ways in which men of power have attempted to perpetuate themselves through political bequests would fill a hefty volume. Tito's plans may lead to a disruption of his country and a mad scramble among his would-be heirs. After all, his rule is a dictatorship tempered by federalism.

FROM EDMONTON — By JAMES H. GRAY

An Election Without Issues in Alberta

WITH the announcement that Alberta will go to the polls on August 30, the question confronting Premier Harry Strom and his Socreds can be put in one word — Next?

Canadian electors have been booting provincial governments from office with high glee for many months. The shattering defeat of the Thatcher Liberals in Saskatchewan conformed to a trend established in the Maritimes and Manitoba. It all added up to an ill omen for Harry Strom. But it is an omen he has chosen to ignore. Some of his reasons are compelling, at least at first glance.

Gray

The first is that this will be an election without issues for there is no discernible policy principle dividing the Socreds and Conservatives. This will not even be an election between Tweedledum and Tweedle-dee. It is an election between Tweedle-dum and Tweedle-dum. It will be, as well, an election between party leaders of incomparable dullness.

As for issues, Alberta is not Saskatchewan or Manitoba economically or politically. Alberta's agriculture is much less a prisoner of King Wheat than Saskatchewan's. Alberta has booming natural gas to compensate for the slackening of its oil boom; and its coal resources have come back to life with a bang of strip mining activity. Saskatchewan's potash industry is sicker than its wheat industry while nothing takes up the slack in its oil industry. Manitoba was simply engulfed in a stagnating economy that seemed to defy all remedial measures.

Conciliatory

So in Alberta there is no great issue that can be used to unseat a government that has been too long in office. In addition, Strom lacks the abrasive personality of the late Mr. Thatcher, who made a career out of making enemies. Strom is the conciliator, who never gets mad at anybody and may well be the slowest-to-anger politician in western history.

In Saskatchewan, the New Democrats were able to topple the Liberals by corralling most of the Conservative votes. In Alberta, the chance of Peter Lougheed and his Conservatives attracting the Liberal vote is more than remote.

Two factors favor the swing of the Liberals to the Socreds. The first is that the union of the two parties provincially has been pushed by the Liberal brass for two years. In Saskatchewan the New Democrats tarred Thatcher with the federal Liberal brush. In Alberta the Liberals hope to undermine the Conservative federal strength by beating down the Lougheed Tories provincially.

The former leader of the Alberta Liberals has joined the Socred party and is acting as campaign co-ordinator in the Calgary area. Other prominent Liberals are providing the Strom urban campaign with muscle it never had before.

As against this, of course, the Conservatives have had some remarkable success under Lougheed. They raised their representation in the 65-seat house from six to 10 seats, including the winning of former Premier E. C. Manning's old seat. But a lot of the steam went out of the Tories at the last session of the legislature. To win they must somehow find an issue that will cut some ice with an electorate long habituated to voting Socred.

Where the Tories may have some advantage is in the appeal to the younger electors and the sports-going crowd. Don Getty in Edmonton is a former Edmonton Eskimo quarterback. Lougheed himself had a short run at football. Normie Quong, of the famous Quong-Bright one-two punch is running in Calgary. In this election, 35,000 18-year-olds will have the franchise which will tip the electoral scales in the favor of younger candidates.

But does a 42-year-old leader like Lougheed qualify in the eyes of the high school graduates as a member of the "now" generation? With his smart business suits and well trimmed hair? And do the 18-year-olds really get turned on with politics?

Long Shots Only

As for the New Democrats and Liberals, the chance of either electing a single member is remote. Grant Notley, the NDP leader has demonstrated a genius for getting the media's attention which far outstrips his importance. The Liberals are running 25 or 30 candidates for a house of 75 and none is considered being more than a long shot.

Both the Conservatives and Socreds will go into the campaign with well-stocked war chests. The oil industry, which previously fired the boilers for Social Credit, is reportedly swinging some support to Lougheed. But publicly the oilmen will stay under the barn during the campaign. The renegotiation of oil royalties will be up next year and the industry cannot risk antagonizing either party. So it will stay as far from the hustings as it is possible to get.

FROM WASHINGTON — By TOM BRADEN

'Doors Are Opening' for Jimmy Hoffa

THE childlike code in which Secretary of Labor James Hodgson disguised his message to the Teamsters at their Miami convention served to dramatize its meaning. "Doors are opening," the secretary told the membership assembled and the translation is clear. James Hoffa, the Teamsters' recently resigned president, will get at least parole and possibly full presidential commutation.

The decision had been telegraphed previously in other ways. Prison officials can recall precedents for permitting a federal prisoner to leave jail in order to visit an ailing wife. They can recall none for permitting him to remain away eight days while holding business meetings with former associates in a hotel room. (Mrs. Hoffa, it turned out, was just fine.) And some months ago, President Nixon played host to publisher William Loeb of Manchester, N.H., whose various pleas and affidavits on behalf of Hoffa are habitually reported in the press straight-faced, as though the public could learn nothing from the additional fact that Loeb has borrowed millions from the Teamsters' pension fund.

It may be that the departure of Frank Sinatra from the Democratic camp was also a signal. Sinatra, one-time Kennedy and Humphrey fund-raiser, is a close friend of Hoffa's, and has now become a friend of Vice-President Agnew.

In any event, the union chief, who was convicted of jury tampering and of stealing, will shortly be free to return to his political and financial affairs, which will surely include a voice in the management of the billion-dollar Teamster pension fund. (The fund was only $300 million in the days when Robert Kennedy was accused of being ruthless for insisting that jury-tampering and stealing deserved punishment.)

In return for the favor of freedom, the Nixon political campaign next year may expect a certain cash flow, in addition to what votes Hoffa can swing from the 2½ million Teamsters, their wives and other relatives.

True, the president may pay a price for the spectacle of an administration self-proclaimed as favoring "law and order" falling all over itself to curry friendship with a union whose pension fund is a national scandal. Eight officials of the labor department were present at the convention to hear the news that Hoffa would become president-emeritus and would be given a million dollars outright upon his assumption of the post. In addition to what security he may feel from family retention of highly-paid jobs for his wife and son.

Forgotten Precedent

In his request for parole, Hoffa has made much of his resignation from the presidency and of severing his ties with the union. This fact is said to be persuasive to the parole board, whose members have apparently forgotten that the last public figure to sever ties and to claim the title "president-emeritus" was Papa Doc Duvalier.

There remains the question of what the government can do about the mismanagement of one of the nation's largest pension funds, built up by and for working men and invested solely by officials who have stolen from it, made payoffs and finder's fees, bribed juries and risked ventures with organized crime while offering no guarantee that any working Teamster will ever be pensioned.

Sen. Javits of New York has a bill which, if it had been law during Hoffa's rise to power, might have prevented him from becoming rich at the expense of truck drivers. It would require "prudent" investment, full disclosure and federal supervision. It would prohibit transactions with "parties at interest," and it would re-ensure beneficiaries if investments go sour.

It is a good bill and it promises to make all pension plans honest. But it comes too late to do justice to Hoffa, who has served 4½ years of a 13-year term, but has been able, nevertheless, to put away a little for his old age.

Looking Back

From the Times of July 30, 1911:

Ottawa — The opening gun in the campaign which will determine the fate of the reciprocity agreement between the United States and Canada was fired today by the Liberal leader, Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

It was in the form of an open address to the Canadian people and sets forth clearly the issues involved in the present campaign. The question at issue is not a new one, Sir Wilfrid asserts; reciprocal relations with the United States have been sought by both parties for over half a century.

No Bridge

Your editorial of several days ago, raising the possibility of building a bridge from the mainland to Vancouver Island is a spectre which is comparable to the idea of bridging the English Channel in 1943. It would also bring an unwelcome invasion that would completely deteriorate the quality of life on our Island.

As it is, our roads are jammed with campers and trailers, and our campsites are unavailable for us. This horde flees a ruined environment to the south, seeking some peace and beauty here, but unfortunately brings the plague with them.

If Island residents require better access to the mainland, a resident preference system could be used on the ferries.

For our own benefit, and to preserve an area offering a solace to our smog-ridden neighbors, we should concentrate on visitor programs which bring people without their cars, and offer them a chance to see our lovely Island on foot, by bicycle, boat and by various improved forms of public transportation — from the Tally Ho on up. — Robert McInnes, 121 Elroy Place.

Exit Olde Bitte

It was with no small amount of interest that I read in the Times Mr. Philip Holmes' statement that this little bit of England has had it.

Having written to the Victoria Chamber of Commerce several times on this subject, I am pleased as a Canadian by his agreement.

It would seem that the little bit of old England is getting a tortuous demise.

I was taken with a recent Times editorial that used the term little bit of Canada which, in reality, we are.

Cherished Memory

I know the beach described in the letter from A. C. Carder in the Times of July 28.

The last five years of the nine and one-half spent at Jordan River — August 1911 to December 1920 — we lived in a house, now demolished, at the west end of that beach. It was a beautiful place for children to play, and many carefree hours were spent roaming along it, playing in the sand and paddling in the small streams. At the end of the beach, which we called First Point, there was a creek at the mouth of which was a delightful pool where one could float. After a bit of rough walking one could follow the beach on to Sandstone Creek as it was called then. A friend, my sister and I did just that a few years ago, joining the men in the party, who met us at the bridge with a car. Bare feet on dry, fine sand and small puddles—there is nothing like it! I, too, hope the locality does not become completely ruined. — Winifred (Mrs.) W. Ockenden, 2436 Central.

Inviting Trouble

Calgary Herald

Such a law can only be regarded as an invitation to trouble.

It has to be assumed that, once the right to strike has been extended, it will be used sooner or later. And, of course, immediately the police force in a city the size of Winnipeg went on strike, it would have to be ordered back to work. The strike of Montreal policemen some months ago starkly demonstrated the utter impossibility of allowing such a walkout to occur.

If a police strike cannot be allowed to last, what is the use of extending the right? It is nothing but sheer pretence.

The federal government, in a lax moment, extended the right to strike to its civil servants in 1966. Since then, there have been strikes in essential public services which caused no end of trouble. The postal, air traffic controllers, printers and government dockyard workers unions were those which accepted the offer to have strike options written into their contracts. Other civil service unions opted to accept arbitration as the ultimate means of setlement under the new regulations drawn up for collective bargaining in the federal service. It has been made clear, if there had been any need for a demonstration that a right extended is a right which will be used.

The Manitoba government believes there are ample safeguards within its Labor Relations Act to prevent a disastrous police walkout. If such is the case, why should it be necessary to grant the right to strike to policemen?

POT: The Great Debate

Pot use "leads to violence and crime . . . opens the mind and enhances creativity . . . smoking is the first step in the use of such drugs as cocaine, morphine and heroin . . . is an aphrodisiac . . . has a causal relationship to psychosis . . . is an extremely safe drug when compared to secobarbital and alcohol."

Each of these partial quotations from Lester Grinspoon's recent book "Marihuana Reconsidered" can become the departure point for an evening-long discussion with one's friends, reaffirming for the cognoscenti the suspicion that demonologists are in our midst.

Having tilted on numerous occasions with those whose minds have been captured by the "demonology" of marijuana I am particularly sensitive to how deeply we as a society have been committeed to a position that is based on superstition and undocumented hearsay.

For three generations misinformation about this drug has been embedded into our literature, our minds, our ethos and, increasingly, our laws.

How well this misinformation has been planted and carefully nurtured is attested to by our continued inability to use the available scientific evidence to modify Federal statutes which are not only unrealistic but Draconian in nature.

This societal "blindspot" has created a dilemma. One facet of the dilemma is the Alice-in-Wonderland relationship we have fashioned between marijuana and alcohol.

On the one hand we find that possession of alcohol, a central nervous system depressant which has produced physical dependence in an estimated 6,000,000 Americans and psychological dependence in perhaps five times that number, is not only free of penalty but its use is even encouraged by our society to such a degree that nonusers of the drug are regarded by most as being somewhat peculiar.

On the other hand mere possession of marijuana, a mild "halfucinogen" incapable of producing physical dependence and whose ability to create psychological dependence is judged to be less than that of alcohol and tobacco, is considered a heinous crime punishable upon conviction by imprisonment for varying periods up to 99 years.

Grinspoon, a Harvard Medical School psychiatrist, analyses this and other aspects of the marijuana problem and concludes that, "we must consider the enormous harm, both obvious and subtle, short range and long-term, inflicted on the people, particularly the young, who constitute or will soon constitute the formative and critical members of our society by the present punitive, repressive approach to the use of marijuana.

"And we must consider the damage inflicted on legal and other institutions when young people react to what they see as a confirmation of their view that those institutions are hypocritical and inequitable. Indeed the greatest potential for social harm lies in the scarring of so many young people and the reactive, institutional damages that are direct products of present marijuana laws.

"If we are to avoid having this harm reach the proportion of a national disaster within the next decade, we must move to make the social use of marijuana legal.'"

Before reaching this conclusion Grinspoon covers, in an unusually well documented fashion, the biology, chemistry, pharmacology and toxicity of marijuana; the potential medical uses which merit further study; the psychological effects of using the drug; and the social and legal implications of usage both with regard to the individual and society. For the serious student who seeks original sources a 42-page section of notes has been provided.

That there will be criticisms of the conclusions and the manner in which they were reached goes without question, for the issues involved are so emotionally laden that reason will be cast aside and specious arguments introduced.

There will be critics who will find fault on the grounds that the potential dangers have been minimized and that we know too little to legalize usage at this point in time.

Others will argue that undue bias was involved in the exclusion of reports which document the problems associated with usage of cannabis sativa (marijuana).

As to the first criticism the author in anticipation

By JAMES L. GODDARD

(Dr. Goddard is former Commissioner of the U.S. Federal Food and Drug Administration. He wrote this article for the New York Times Book Review.)

'Misinformation Embedded in Our Minds and Laws'

states, "it is quite true that among the hundreds and hundreds of papers dealing with cannabis, there is relatively little methodologically sound research. Yet out of this vast collection of largely unsystematic recordings comes the strong impression that no amount of research is likely to prove that cannabis is as dangerous as alcohol and tobacco."

On this point I would agree that research may not be able to demonstrate equivalent dangers, but I would hasten to point out if usage were at the same level and over as prolonged a period of time we might find that lung cancer, or emphysema or other disorders would occur as often as with tobacco.

This does not invalidate Grinspoon's conclusions but rather suggests that if the use of marijuana were to be made legal it should be made available in dosage forms that are potentially less dangerous.

On the second point concerning the bias in selection of material, having personally reviewed the English portion of the world literature in preparation for Congressional hearings, I can only express my admiration for the manner in which Grinspoon has extracted, analysed and synthesized the most relevant literature to present the reader with a coherent, logical case. He inevitably leads to the conclusion that, as a society, we were systematically coerced into making the same mistake in 1937 with marijuana that was made earlier with alcohol by the passage of the Volstead Act.

It is difficult to understand why this "error" was made by many of the same legislators who just a few years earlier had in repealing the Volstead Act recognized the wisdom of Spinoza's admonition: "He who seeks to regulate everything by law is more likely to arouse vices than reform them."

Difficult, at any rate, unless one speculates that the liquor lobby played a critical, albeit subtle role in the "legal onslaught" which occurred during the early and mid-thirties and culminated in the passage of the Federal Marijuana Tax Act of 1937.

Grinspoon's evaluation is that new products may be developed from either naturally occurring marijuana or one of the synthetic forms which have: (1) analgesic properties in combination with mood elevating abilities; (2) the effect of lowering blood pressure through different mechanisms than today's drugs; and (3) have antidepressant and antianxiety effects again different in their mechanism of action than today's drugs.

Emergence of a new drug in any one of these three classes would be a substantial contribution, particularly if the drug possessed greater margins of safety or fewer side effects than drugs presently being used.

The development of a new drug, no matter how valuable, would of course not change the major issue for the 20 million or so users in our society today.

They will continue to press for legalization of marijuana in the face of opposition from the majority of the citizenry, who although ill-informed and overactive, feel that to take this step "would be to invite national tragedy."

As for myself, I would favor legalization only if I were confident that a control system could be devised to preclude widespread usage by adolescents.

They are not well equipped to handle a drug which provides a pleasant escape from reality, promotes inattention and would distract them from their main task — growing up.

'Take Your Drugs And Die'

By RICHARD NEEDHAM

It's long been my view that governments have only three essential functions —(1) to defend the country against foreign attack; (2) to prevent the citizenry from bashing or killing one another; (3) to prevent the citizenry from bashing or stealing one another's property. If any government can manage those three things, it's doing as well as any in history, and better than most.

But North Americans don't see it that way. They want governments to make people "good," to prevent them from committing "sins" such as drinking too much or reading naughty books or straying off the marital reservation.

Unfortunately, these sins enjoy such popularity that laws against them can never be enforced, the result being a massive waste of time and energy on the part of police, courts, etc.; and a massive disrespect for law by those very citizens who demanded the law in the first place as a curious attempt to protect themselves from themselves.

I reached the conclusion years ago that there should be no liquor laws of any kind (outside of pure-food supervision), no laws of any kind dealing with sex or marriage (let people make their own arrangements, as they will anyhow); no laws regarding gambling or betting, Sabbath observance or books with such remarkable titles (I noticed it in a supermarket the other day) as Hotpants Schoolma'am. As Will Rogers remarked about alcohol during Prohibition times, the only way to stop them from getting it is to let them have it.

I've come to feel the same way about drugs — my own kind, such as alcohol and tobacco; other people's kind such as marijuana, LSD and heroin. It should be obvious by now that there is just no way to stop people from making them, importing them, buying and selling them, using them. This being the case, we might just as well legalize all of them, let them all be sold openly, as was the case until around 1910.

This would have four advantages that I can see. Firstly, we'd save an awful lot of money and effort on law enforcement — or rather, law non-enforcement. Secondly, the price would come down to the point where people on drugs didn't have to commit genuine crimes in order to get the money for them.

Thirdly, this would weed out of our society a lot of people who probably ought to be weeded out — weak, useless people who simply clutter up the scene.

Don Marquis said that the only worthwhile treatment for alcoholics was to give them all the booze they could drink, in hopes of bringing about their early demise. I'm inclined to feel the same way about takers of LSD, heroin, etc. I do not wish their death, but they themselves quite obviously wish it, so let's hurry the process along.

Fourthly (and this is what appeals to me most of all) it would clear our newspapers, our radio microphones and TV screens; of what has become a crashing bore — those endless examinations of the "drug problem," those endless articles and shows and laborious panel discussions of how the "problem" can be "solved," how young people and adults can be "saved" from the disaster course they deliberately have chosen.

Why bother? The glutton chooses to dig his grave with his teeth, we allow him to do it; we might as well allow other people to dig their graves with their syringe or whatever.

No control ever works on this earth except self-control; if people can't manage that, I'm not going to shed any tears over them; let's bury the weak, the parasitic, and make more room for the strong.

▣

I sometimes think that the people who try to "help" and "save" the druggies are themselves a bunch of weaklings, who seek to bolster up their own frail egos with their "confrontation sessions" and "sensitivity groups" and "encounter therapy" and all the rest of that mumbling garbage.

It reminds me of the boozy old bums, the so-called mission stiffs, who recount and repent their sins in order to get a bowl of soup. "Yea verily, brethren, I have found salvation." Forget it, forget it, he'll be panhandling outside the liquor store in another few minutes.

Dear young people — and old ones, too — I must tell you that your "trip," good or bad, doesn't interest me. I've no interest in "talking you down" — or in paying taxes so others can do it. I've no interest in the great masterpieces you are going to produce (but never do produce) as a result of having your peanut mind "expanded."

I've no interest in the terrible "problem" which led you, as you say, into drugs — your wicked father, your domineering mother, your anger at the economic system, your grief over the war in Vietnam, your whole battery of flimsy excuses for the fact you are a weakling and a fool.

Death you want, and death you should have. Time was when you would have courted it — and likely won it — in crusades, explorations, revolutions, in the jungles, in the mountains or on the high seas.

But you don't have the courage or the honesty for that; you are accustomed to being "looked after"; even in your self-chosen drug habit, you think there should be daddies and mummies to "help" you, you haven't the guts to do the thing yourself.

So take your drugs and die. I'm completely bored with the whole lot of you — and I don't think I'm alone in that boredom.

(The Globe and Mail)

'Let's Put It in a Jar of Water'

By DALTON CAMP

I went to a movie the other evening, for reasons which now elude me. The name of the film was Bananas, I think, and, perhaps I went because I thought it would be all about Mr. Stanfield; but anyway, it wasn't.

Bananas wasn't really about much of anything and since I failed to become involved in it, as they say, I began to study the audience, which is not easy in the dark of the threatre, but you do get a sense of the audience by listening to its silence, or the self-conscious laughter, or the surreptitious snickers, or the genuine guffaws.

Somewhere near the end of Bananas, the hero of the film finds himself in court, before judge and jury, and the audience became pretty silent. About then, however, the camera, for whatever reason, discovered the jury enjoying itself smoking pot, whereupon the audience, which I had surmised was a generation behind me, broke up into uninhibited laughter.

* * *

The scene was not funny, at least to me, and so I enquired of a friend of mine, who goes to movies more often than I do. Well, he said, it's just that anything in the films these days that turns on smoking pot also turns on the audience, since most audiences are young, and most of the young audience thinks it's funny.

He mentioned a scene from M.A.S.H. in which the football players on the bench began passing a joint around, which proved to be exceedingly funny to the audience. He could not say why this was so entertaining, but he thought it had to do with the generation gap, anti-establishment attitudes, and other tedious contemporary mores of the young at heart.

* * *

I remember as a child — say 14, 15, or so — when the question was whether or not it was sensible to smoke cigarettes. In those days, every cinema hero smoked like a chimney about 30 per cent of the whole movie had to do with taking a cigarette out of a solid, silver box, lighting it with a solid, silver lighter, and blowing smoke into the face of the audience. Guys who smoked were cool; dames who did were sophisticated, or liberated, or, at least, they were beautiful.

Meanwhile, we used to have these moral lectures in Sunday school about tobacco. Some of the kids took the pledge — never would they take a puff of the noxious weed. And to prove the wisdom of that decision, a man would drop a cigarette into a glass of water and invite you to examine the mess it made about an hour later. Believe me, it looked like hell.

But of course, a lot of us laughed at that. After all, if you dropped a dish of strawberry shortcake into a glass of water it also looked like hell after a while. But the important fact was that Humphrey Bogart and Errol Flynn never seemed to do anything heroic unless they had a smoke first.

So all this gets me to the Le Dain Commission, which is, among other things, determining how permissive the law should be with regard to pot. There is not the least doubt that pot is popular, especially among the young, and all the dire warnings against it, just like those issued by creeps in Sunday school against the cigarette, are to be scorned.

* * *

Besides, we are told, it is less harmful than alcohol or, would you believe, tobacco. And the movie makers, who are the pace-setters among the youth, deify it. Who needs more reason than that?

Well, I need convincing. First, I resist the conventional wisdom anyway. Second, I think the analogy between the corrosive damage of alchol vs. the euphoric blessing of pot is an horrendous non-sequitur.

Almost everyone I know takes a drink, or more than that. Most of us started in our 20s, not in our teens. And most of us started modestly — there being such a thing as economics — and most of us learned to cope with the stuff, to enjoy it, and to survive it. As the youth say, "ya know" it took most of us 15 years to learn just how to make a martini, never mind enjoying it, but our rake's progress has been temperate, moderate, and related to both personal capacity and a gathered personal experience.

* * *

The Le Dain Commission, so we are told, is about to allow pot to be enjoyed by all, the minute one passes through Grade 12. (I don't believe it, but the media tell me so.) Well I'm not at all sure of the wisdom of it. I would rather — far rather — let the young experiment, if they must, with beer, wine and spirits, find their own tolerance level, assuming they are lucky enough to do so, before we open up the gates to free access to pot.

Yes, we should reduce the harshness of the law with regard to those who consume it. But no, we should not yet legalize it. Instead, let's put it in a jar of water and see what happens.

My signal to Mr. Le Dain and his colleagues is: Don't be in a rush to turn all that theatre laughter into an embarrassed silence.

MINING SCHOOL NEAR ROSSLAND

A school for miners with mining equipment and minerals to work with opens near Rossland Aug. 13.

The British Columbia Mining School on Red Mountain will be opened by Education Minister Donald Brothers, who is former minister of mines, supported by Mines Minister Frank Richter, Manpower regional director L. Stewart McGill, and president T. H. McClelland of the Mining Association of B.C.

The B.C. education department, federal Manpower and immigration department and the mining association are co-sponsors of the school, set up to match a need for experienced operators in a booming industry that becomes increasingly technical.

Located four miles out of Rossland, a primary base metals mining centre, the school is first of its kind in Canada.

Special Appeal To New Residents

United Appeal chairman Eric Charman Thursday made a special appeal to newly-retired residents of the area to support this year's campaign.

Speaking at a Victoria Rotary Club luncheon in the Empress Hotel, Charman said:

"We ask newly-retired residents what makes them come to this area. They're attracted here because we have no smoke-stack industries — they (the residents) represent the only expanding industry in this area. We say you have an opportunity to get out and make yourselves known in the campaign; work for some of the things that help makes this community."

He answered critics who say they don't support the campaign because they don't believe in one or more of the 23 agencies.

He said there was no reason to deprive a handicapped child at the George R. Pearkes Clinic because they don't believe in Boy Scouts or deprive a person on an operating table of blood because they are not entirely sold on another organization in the campaign.

"I say forget these people. If you check you find they don't give to anything."

Charman said donors should ask themselves whether the amount they give to the United Appeal is the same as what they give other individual campaigns during the year.

MONTHLY SUM

If it is, Charman suggested that donors consider giving a monthly allotment rather than one set sum.

"Then we would have no difficulty going over the top."

Asserting that there was "no better way to obtain better value for a buck" than by supporting the campaign, Charman added:

"There is nothing more of an insult to the community — and a luxury that Greater Victoria can ill afford — than to have an image of a loser."

Charman said Victoria is the 48th city down the ladder in per capita giving and he blamed the failure on campaign officials.

Appeal Gets Early Start

Donations to the 1971 United Appeal campaign have started early — and at the top.

Campaign chairman Eric Charman reports that Community Chest directors have decided to set an example. They've already donated $6,000 — about $158 per capita — and there are other cheques to come.

Charman is also elated about the response shown by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

"They've already sent three cheques from different departments that have business here and the total amount is three times more than they normally give. And there's more to come.

"I'm excited as hell about it."

Apathy Stalls Campaign

Public apathy has all but stalled a campaign to help drug and alcohol addicts in Greater Victoria.

The Pacific Drug Dependency Society, in asking the public for $60,000 urgently-needed funds early this week, has thus far received only one or two "minimal" donations.

The money would be used to purchase and double the capacity of Bridge House boarding centre for up to 14 persons at 1354 Pandora. The lease on the building runs out in October and the society would like to continue helping alcoholics and drug addicts on a more permanent basis.

To get the fund drive moving, guided tours will be conducted through Bridge House by society officials (phone 383-7106). Anyone wanting to donate should mail cash or cheque to the Pacific Drug Dependency Society trust fund in the Bank of Montreal, Richmond and Fort.

William Ogston, the 54-year-old driving force behind the society, said Thursday the slow response is a sign that people don't feel drug addiction and alcoholism affect them—or care about the problems.

Ogston said the fund will continue in the hopes that there are people who consider the situation desperate.

"We don't have to save many lives to make it worth $60,000.

The society also operates "Stumble Inn" at Quadra and Caledonia as a shelter for up to 25 alcoholics.

NEW YORK — Dozens of rock fans at the Forest Hills music festival watched in horror Thursday night as one youth stabbed another to death outside the world-famous tennis stadium. Kerry Flaherty, 21, who police said was on parole from the state prison at Elmira, N.Y., where he served time on robbery and drug charges, was held for the stabbing. Police said Flaherty attempted to enter the stadium without a ticket and began quarrelling with George Etheriege, 22, at the gate. Then, in front of a crowd, Flaherty pulled a knife and plunged it into the other man's chest. Security guards seized Flaherty but could not hold off a mob of youths who beat the ex-convict to the ground before police arrived.

EDMONTON — Dr. Donald Scott has been appointed the University of Alberta's first ombudsman. Dr. Scott, a member of the university's physics department since 1940, is the former chairman of the department of computer science and director of the computing centre. His duties will involve the investigation of complaints and grievances made to him by students and staff concerning academic and adminstrative procedures, practices and decisions.

MEXICO CITY — A pair of pickled pepper packers have been picked up by police for packing pot in pepper packets and peddling it, police said. Jesus Flores and Alfonso Soto had been canning the marijuana in the Nogales packing plant for more than a year and exporting to to California and New York in can wrapped with brand-name labels of hot peppers and other Mexical foods such as Ate and Chongos.

DARWIN, Australia — British flyer Sheila Scott landed here Thursday after another leg in her attempt to become the first woman to fly alone around the world via the Polar route. She flew into Darwin from Townsville, 1,200 miles away on the north Queensland coast.

NEW YORK — Maria Nevelska, Russian-born ballet instructor and onetime performer with the Bolshoi Ballet, died in hospital here Wednesday, two days after she was attacked in her studio at Carnegie Hall. She was 80. Police said the petite dance coach, who had taught here since 1953, was attacked in her studio by an unknown man Monday morning, a few hours before she was to conduct a class.

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — The United States has not yet asked Switzerland to extradite Dr. Timothy Leary, the one-time drug advocate, Swiss authorities said today. Leary was arrested by Swiss police at the beginning of July on the basis of an international warrant issued by the United States. He is in prison here pending an extradition request from Washington.

LONDON — Prime Minister Edward Heath of Britain and Premier Jack Lynch of the Irish Republic will meet here Oct. 20-21 on the troubles in Northern Ireland where British troops are battling Irish Republican terrorists, Heath's office announced Thursday.

Lost Boy Found

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Lost for 26 hours in a mountainous Indian reserve during a church campout, a 10-year-old boy with a need for daily medication found the men searching for him Thursday.

In tears, Todd Colwait ran into the arms of his mother, who was at the search base near camp.

He was badly scratched in the brush-filled canyons of the Volcan Mountains but described by a doctor as all right.

Todd, wearing shorts and barefoot, reported he was lured by an animal away from the campsite about 40 miles northeast of San Diego in the Santa Isabel Indian reserve.

The youngster takes medication for a condition which makes him nervously active unless it is controlled, authorities said.

Students Ask Mobile Birth Control Clinic

Mobile clinics supplying comprehensive sex and birth control education to Victoria's secondary schools is the aim of a newly-formed Birth Control Rights Committee.

Two Victoria area high school students, a Vancouver high school student, two University of Victoria students and a B.C. Institute of Technology student are the committee members.

Seeking support from other community and political organizations, parents and other students, the group is critical of what it terms "the school board's more conservative attempts at sex education."

But members primarily blame the Social Credit government for what they consider a continuing policy of denying to B.C. students any realistic form of birth control information.

Briefs will be presented to respective school boards and the government this fall and petitions will be circulated throughout schools. Anyone interested in joining the group is asked to phone 383-0811 for more information.

PRAVDA 'SLIP' CUTS PROGRAM OFF

NEW YORK (AP) — An interview with entertainer George Jessel on the NBC television Today show was cut short today after Jessel referred to the New York Times and the Washington Post as "Pravda."

Jessel made the remarks twice during the interview with NBC reporters Edwin Newman and Joe Garagiola.

Newman terminated the interview about a minute before its scheduled conclusion.

Discussing what he called the strength of United States troops in bases in Spain and Britain which he had just visited, Jessel complained:

"Of course, when you pick up Pravda, uh, the New York Times, you'll see it's all full of dope and killing children."

Jessel said the drug situation among U.S. armed servicemen is "so exaggerated, it's almost childish."

"We have some strange new thing with the communique being anti-American," said Jessel, beginning again: "Then you pick up Pravda, uh, the Washington Post."

At this point, Newman interrupted Jessel, saying, "Mr. Jessel, you are a guest here. I don't think very much of this 'Pravda, excuse me, the New York Times, Pravda, excuse me, the Washington Post.'

"I think that's silly, I really do."

"You have our opinions, and I have mine," Jessel responded. "Hold on a second," said Newman. "I think what you say is serious if you mean it. One does not accuse newspapers of being Communist, which you have just done."

"I didn't mean it that way," said Jessel, who added: "I won't say it again."

"I agree, you won't say it again," said Newman, interrupting Jessel.

Jessel tried to continue, saying: "I just wanted to say one more thing."

"Please don't," said Newman.

As the interview, scheduled for six minutes, ended about one-minute early, Jessel said: "Good, I'm sorry," and the network went to a station break.

Happily, things are looking up in the battle against air pollution. Because, fortunately, a lot has been done by Chevrolet in the past 10 years to check pollution caused by our cars.
In the early 1960's we began installing emission controls on our engines. And now, every 1971 Chevrolet is equipped to reduce hydrocarbon output by 80% and carbon monoxide emissions by about two-thirds.
You can help, too. Keep your car tuned and those pollution controls checked regularly.
Let that sun shine in.

Mercury Found In Dead Pigeons

High levels of mercury were found in the livers of seven pigeon guillemots found dead several weeks ago on a small island off Oak Bay, B.C. Fish and Wildlife biologist Rory Finegan said Thursday.

The dead birds were found sitting on their nests by provincial museum director Dr. Bristol Foster.

Level of mercury contamination found in the birds, 4.9 parts per million is considered seriously high. Finegan said.

"If such a level was found in birds humans ate, a warning would have to be issued to throw away livers and kidneys, the parts where mercury collects and builds up."

Finegan, who returned from the provincial laboratory in Vancouver where the tests were conducted, said the necks of the birds were apparently broken by mink.

Source of the mercury is not known.

LOADING U.S. LOGS on to the Sammi No. 1 from Korea are Canadian longshoremen at Cowichan Bay. The scene is angering some Cowichan Bay residents, who say the logs are creating debris in a recreation area and posing a hazard to boaters, and pleasing some businessmen who are selling more cups of coffe and such. The logs, according to one longshoreman, were pulled by a tug up from Washington because of the four-week-long longshoremen's strike in U.S. (Donna Clements Photo).

Forest Road to Open

Travel restrictions on the Port Hardy forest road—which links the public highway at Port Hardy with the Holberg turn-off at Mile 20.5 — will end on Wednesday.

In making the announcement Thursday, the B.C. Forest Service warns however that extreme caution is required by all who drive along the forest road. Vehicles cannot pass safely anywhere along the road except at especially established turn-outs. These are located at frequent intervals.

In the interest of safety, logging trucks will not pull over to permit other vehicles to pass except at the turn-out locations. Another danger: maintenance work has been proposed for the road and motorists are advised to watch for construction equipment.

When using the forest road during working hours (normally 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday) motorists are advised to wait for and follow a logging truck — at a safe distance, and with headlights on.

Last Chance This Summer!

Read What Parents Say:

Last month Victoria Athletic Coaching Clinic began Canada's only professionally-taught classes in soccer, basketball, floor hockey, gymnastics and swimming, for physically fit boys 8 to 15. Now we're enrolling for August; $15 a week, $50 for the month. We've called it "the finest gift you can give your son this summer." Here's what parents have said within the last few days. "My son is enjoying it so much that he wants to enroll for a second month." Mrs. E. Beaulieu.

"I went down to watch them in action. The level of coaching is superb." Mrs. Ridley.

"Last year we sent our boys to camp. They say they think Coaching Clinic beats camp all hollow." Mr. Thompson.

"He is learning to be an expert and somehow he walks a little taller just for being there." Mrs. T. A. Prentice.

Mayor Draws Few Listeners

Clad in Bermuda shorts and a sportshirt, Ney found himself addressing only nine of 180 Chamber members.

"The rich will get richer, the poor will get welfare and the middle-class will pay the whole shot," Ney, himself a wealthy man, complained as he predicted that taxes in municipalities across Canada will again double in the next 12 years.

"The cost of servicing cities is getting further and further out of sight from the limited income municipalities receive and the present tax base on which they must depend," Ney noted.

He went on to say that the original principle of taxing property to pay for services to property has been violated.

NEY
. . . taxing taxes

"Originally property was taxed to pay for basic municipal services such as water, sewer, fire and police protection. Today these are minor expenses. The big charges are for services to people in areas such as education, welfare, health services, care for the aged and pollution control."

"But the public is demanding this," Ney said.

He noted that many municipal representatives feel that services to people should be paid for by taxes on people through income tax, sales tax, liquor tax and all other taxes with some elastic in them.

Fire Guts Quadra Store

CAMPBELL RIVER — A fire gutted a 50-year-old two-storey building containing a cafe and store on Quadra Island Wednesday night, causing damage estimated at $80,000.

The former 50-year-old B.C. Packer building was owned by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Miller who operated the Three Sisters cafe and store. The property was insured.

The fire was triggered by a deep fryer in the restaurant springing a leak and exploding, according to Miller. He was not injured in the blast.

Gold Price Hits New Peak

LONDON (Reuter) — Gold was being traded here Thursday night at a new peak of $42.50 U.S. an ounce as speculation mounted in free market circles that the present present buying demand sweeping through Europe would push it up to $45.

The upward price movement continued in all the main bullion markets Thursday. The movement started in June and has since sent the price rocketing by nearly $3 an ounce.

The reason for it is a shortage of gold being offered for sale at a time when industrial users want it for their processing and speculators are switching from uncertain paper currencies into the traditional haven of gold.

In the three main European markets — London, Zurich and Paris — and in Beirut the officially-fixed price Thursday was more than 20 cents an ounce higher than Wednesday's price.

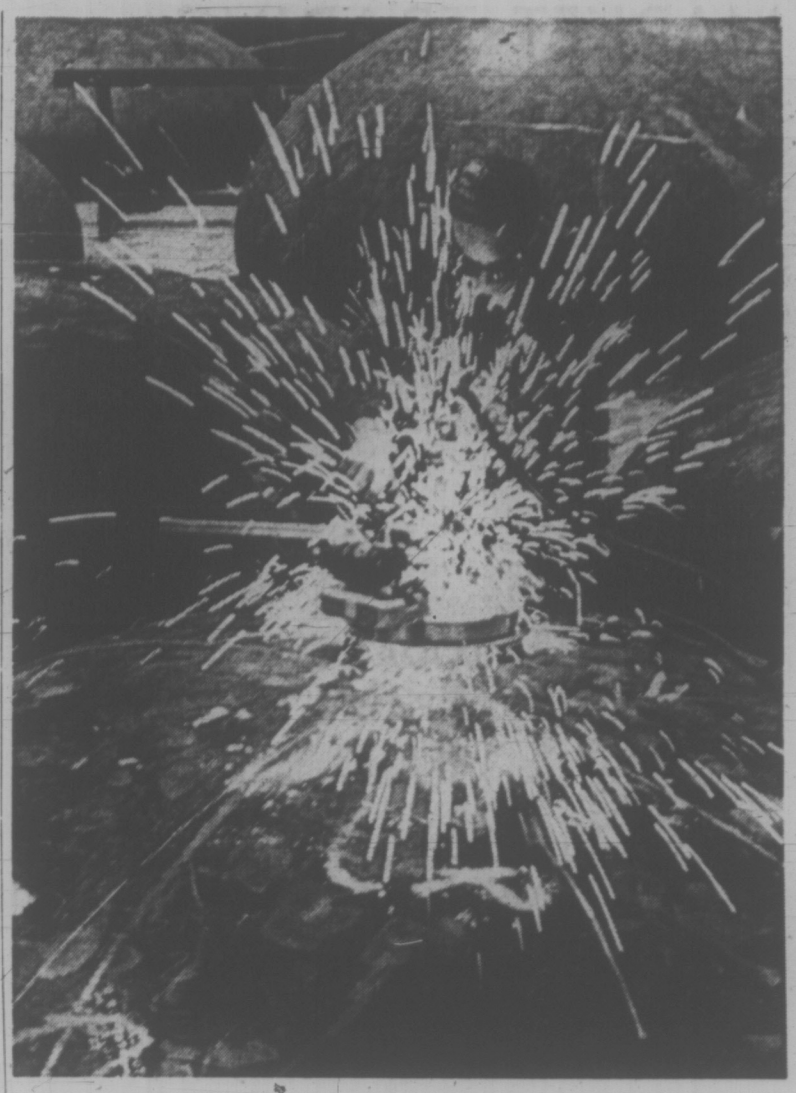
Peso Devalued

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter)—Argentina devalued the peso today to 4.70 pecos to the U.S. dollar from 4.40.



SPARK SHOWER results as fitter performs circular cutting operation on 9 per cent nickel heads at Union Carbide Canada Limited's gas products plant in Bramalea, Ontario. The heads form caps for cyrogenic pressure vessels, ranging in capacity from 500 to 11,000 gallons, used to store liquid nitrogen, argon and oxygen at temperatures as low as -320 degrees F. The gases are employed in a variety of commercial and industrial applications such as food freezing, steel manufacturing, welding and cutting.

Complicated Issues Key to Rate Hikes

OTTAWA (CP) — The resumption next Tuesday of hearings on an application by TransCanada PipeLines Ltd. to increase its gas rates will bring scores of lawyers and corporation executives from across Canada.

The lengthy National Energy Board hearings, which have involved complicated accounting and legal issues, could have repercussions on prices paid for Alberta gas by housewives and businessmen from Saskatchewan to Quebec.

From the Feb. 9, 1971, start of the hearings until their adjournment June 9, TransCanada presented evidence to support its contention that its present rates must be increased if it is to meet the gas requirements of its customers.

Tuesday the board begins hearing evidence from the 20 companies and five provincial governments — Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec — which have intervened in the hearings.

A knotty legal issue was cleared up in June when the Federal Court of Canada ruled that the federal government has authority to regulate the wholesale rates that gas utilities pay to TransCanada.

Ontario utilities had challenged the previously-unused section of 1959 legislation giving the energy board regulatory authority. TransCanada is seeking to have the board increase its rates by using that section for the first time.

TransCanada says it cannot offset increasing costs by further improving its efficiency. In effect, it says it is caught between rising costs and fixed returns under sales contracts that generally run for 20 years.

HALF VIA CANADA

A second squeeze play is also involved: The federal government requires that at least half of the gas sent to Ontario and Quebec by TransCanada go through its Northern Ontario pipeline. Other gas may be sent through facilities in the United States.

With rapidly-growing demand for gas in central Canada, TransCanada plans extensive additions to pipeline capacity. But more earnings are needed to borrow enough funds to finance a major construction program, the company says.

Its proposed solution is to use a new accounting system for calculating the value of its assets. Instead of the more conventional system of taking actual cost of the assets and deducting depreciation, the assets would be assigned a current value.

The current rate base system would take into account the decline in the real value of the dollar and compensate the investor for the decline.

An authorized rate of return on investments would be applied to the calculated value of assets, and TransCanada prices to utilities would then be set to produce the authorized rate of return.

TransCanada's rate of return in 1969 and 1970 was 5.74 and 7.11 per cent respectively.

Opponents of the application have suggested that the proposed rate-base system is untried, vague, complicated and would effectively inflate permissible earnings and therefore prices.

Supertest, BP Oil Agree to Merger

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Supertest Petroleum Corp. Ltd. and BP Canada Ltd. announced agreement Thursday on terms of a merger which will combine the two firms into a major Canadian oil operation.

BP Canada, a holding company owned by the British Petroleum Co. Ltd. of London, England, will acquire 83.7 per cent of the common shares of Supertest at $16.50 per share. There were 1.25 million common shares outstanding at the end of 1970.

Supertest, by means of a share exchange, will acquire BP Canada's entire petroleum interests, held through subsidiaries BP Oil Ltd., BP Refinery Canada Ltd., and BP Oil and Gas Ltd.

Supertest would in turn be controlled by BP Canada Ltd., the holding company which is a subsidiary of the British firm.

The agreement, subject to approval by various regulatory bodies, also involves some share capital reorganization by Supertest. This would need approval of Supertest shareholders.

The companies said in a joint statement that public equity in the new integrated company will be about 30 per cent.

The new firm will market gasoline through about 3,100 branded outlets in Ontario and Quebec. BP has about 1,800 outlets.

R. W. D. Handidge, executive vice-president of BP Oil Ltd. and a vice-president of the Canadian holding company, said in Montreal that they hope the deal will be concluded by the end of the year. BP Canada's head office is in Montreal.

THREAT WITHDRAWN

VANCOUVER (CP)—Neon Products Ltd. withdrew its threat to hire non-union workers Thursday unless its 70 striking employees returned to work but no settlement was reached in the contract dispute.

Cy Stairs, a spokesman for the Sheet Metal Workers' Union, said the ultimatum was lifted after Neon general manager John Gough met Paddy Neale of the Vancouver and District Labor Council and Ed Gay, secretary of the B.C.-Yukon Building Trades Council.

"But there is no settlement and we're not going back to work," he said.

Company spokesmen could not be reached for comment.

Stairs said his union voted by a two-thirds margin to reject an offer of a $1.17 wage increase over 27 months.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE

IT & T

International Telephone and Telegraph Co. reports record sales and earnings for the second quarter, and the first half this year.

Consolidated net income of $104.3 million for the quarter was 12 per cent higher than the $93 million for the same period in 1970, while net income for the first six months of 1971 totalled $181.2 million in the first half of 1970.

Earnings per common share for the second quarter were 90 cents up from 82 cents.

For the half year earnings were $1.57, compared with $1.42 a share.

Metro Stores

Metropolitan Stores of Canada Ltd. shareholders have approved a three-for-one common share split.

Shares of the Winnipeg-based company which operates about 90 variety and junior department stores across Canada traded at $44 on the Toronto Stock Exchange Monday.

The company reported unaudited profit of $34,834 in the three-month period ended April 30 and its six-month report is expected soon.

Scott

Scott Paper Ltd. reports net income for the six months ended June 30 of $848,200 compared with $847,793 for the period in 1970. Income per share was $1.06 for both years.

Scott president A. F. Armstrong said the outlook for the last half of the year is for slower-than-normal sales growth on established products, resulting from a world decline in demand for paper products.

Western

Western Mines Ltd. reports net income of $606,545 or 12 cents a share during the three month period ended June 30.

Net income for the same period last year was $1 million or 20 cents a share.

Phillips

Slightly higher net income is reported by Phillips Petroleum Co. for the second quarter over results of a year ago, totalling $27.6 million (37 cents a share) vs. $25.7 million (35 cents).

Revenue in the period was $599.84 million compared with $572.46 million in the quarter in 1970.

Transair

Transair Ltd. of Winnipeg has reported a profit of $154,000 for the first half of 1971, the first January-June profit reported since reports were first issued in 1966.

The airline reported net loss of $76,000 in the same period last year.

Revenues for the report period totalled $7.8 million, an increase of $1.8 million over the same period in 1970.

The six-month profit includes a $317,000 first-quarter loss and second-quarter profit of $471,000.

Bethlehem

Bethlehem Steel Corp. reports sharply higher sales and earnings in the second quarter as customers built up inventories against the possibility of a steel strike.

For the quarter ended June 30, Bethlehem said net income shot to $47.85 million or $1.08 a share from $26.18 or 59 cents a share in the second quarter last year. Revenues climbed to $1.01 billion from $764.86 million a year ago.

In the first half Bethlehem's net income advanced to $80.98 million (1.83 a share) against $54.48 million ($1.24) last year. Revenues rose to $1.78 billion compared with $1.53 billion in 1970.

Algoma

Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd. reports a sharp drop in earnings for the first half, down to $6.1 million (53 cents a share) compared with $13.6 million ($1.17) the previous year.

Steel production and sales were almost the same during the two periods, but the company said delay in work on a large blast furnace and other production problems hampered operations during the second quarter.

Trans-Canada

First half net income reported by Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd. totalled $7.78 million (94 cents a share) compared with $6.47 million (78 cents) a year earlier.

The rise was partly due to a reduced rate charged Trans-Canada by Alberta Gas Trunk Line Ltd., retroactive to July 1, 1970.

Operating revenue in the half was $160.8 million vs. $138.69 million last year.

Canada Trust

Canada Trust's consolidated earnings in the latest six-month period amount to $4.2 million, up from $2.94 million a year ago, or 76 cents a share vs. 60 cents.

The company completed its merger with Waterloo Trust and Halton and Peel Trust as of June 30.

Stelco

The Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. reports earnings of $19.5 million for the second quarter vs. $17.12 million last year. Share income was 80 cents vs. 70 cents.

Profit for the first six months of this year was $31.27 million ($1.28 a share) compared with $33.42 million ($1.37).

First-half sales totalled $360.4 million this year and $337.92 million last year. Second-quarter sales for the two years were $193.02 million and $176.22 million.

Panarctic

Interest held by 10 oil companies in the Arctic islands has been halved with agreement out of court over participation by Panarctic Oils Ltd., which will have 50 per cent of the total interest.

The 10 companies are headed by Great Plains and Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas, each with 36.875 per cent before the agreement and who will have 18.437 per cent.

Other interest ranges down from Bankeno Mines' 3.75 per cent to .25 per cent held by Conick Petroleums, after Panarctic earns its share by drilling. The first well is under way.

Montreal Trust

Net profit of $1.6 million for the six months ended June 30 — worth 66 cents a share — is sharply higher for Montreal Trust Co., which had $706,000 net (29 cents) a year earlier.

Continued improvement in the guaranteed account which had $2.23 million income ($506,000) and slightly lower expenses, accounted for the better performance.

Can-Base

Final arrangements are reported to have been made by Can-Base Industries Ltd., of Vancouver, in the acquisition of Herschorn Productions Ltd., also of Vancouver, to form the first shareholder-held music recording firm west of Toronto.

Assets acquired included 16-track Aragon Studios and a catalogue of previously recorded LPs and published catalogues, along with the services of Aragon president and its artistic and recording chief.

Production of TV and video cassettes also is planned, and markets outside of Canada are to be developed.

Alcan

Alcan Aluminium Ltd. reports consolidated net income of $17.4 million (U.S.) in the second quarter, compared with $24.5 million in the 1970 period.

This amounted to 51 cents a share compared with 72 cents a year ago.

For the six-months net income was $31.9 million (93 cents) compared with $43.1 million ($1.27).

Consolidated gross revenues from sales and all other sources were $392.1 million in the second quarter compared with $366.7 million a year ago.

Chemcell

An 11 per cent increase in sales in the second quarter is reported by Chemcell Ltd., which had substantially higher net earnings.

The company sold production valued at $29 million vs. $26 million, leaving net income of $929,000 (5.5 cents a share) compared with $299,000 (one cent).

Earnings in the half were up only slightly, on 4 per cent improvement in sales.

Bell

Bell Canada reports net earnings of $70.8 million ($1.84 a share) for the six months ended June 30, up from $66.7 million ($1.79).

Operating revenues for the second quarter of the year were $253 million, an increase of 8.2 per cent from the corresponding 1970 period.

Bell Canada's 1971 provision for income tax would be reduced by over $17 million, equivalent to an increase in earnings of 4.6 cents a share, with elimination of 3 per cent federal surtax.

FEATURE RACE . . . . . AT SANDOWN PARK

Home Flavor in Times Race

The locals will rate a long look Saturday when a field of six thoroughbreds challenges for a purse of $800 and the Times Invitational Handicap, the first of several feature runs highlighting the 1971 Vancouver Island race meet at Sandown Park.

The 12-day session was to get under way this evening, with the first parade to the post at 5 p.m.

Nine races will make up Saturday's second day, with the Times Handicap the feature of the day.

The field includes two Victoria-owned horses. They are Shadow's Dividend, a classy three-year-old owned by Tom Druce, and Dave Barr's Craigdell.

Druce, well-known as a former soccer and lacrosse standout who also coached Victoria Shamrocks a few years ago, also has entered Shadow's Dividend in the Ascot Stakes at Vancouver's Exhibition Park on Aug. 14.

Shadow's Dividend's greatest threat Saturday may come from Insistency. The Tom Laidler-trainer campaigner won his last race impressively at Vancouver's Exhibition Park.

Rounding out the Times Handicap field are Jan Marie, True Lotti, and Leap to Victory.

True Lotti, a four-year-old who has shown best in sprints, has been sharp in recent workouts and seems to be reaching peak form. True Lotti could be the early pacesetter in the one-mile feature and, in the past, has shown a strong liking for the Sandown track.

Horses and horsemen flocked to Sandown Thursday, and virtually all stall space has been claimed.

"A lot of horses have come in that we didn't expect," he said. "That's the kind of problem we don't mind having. From the looks of things, we'll have no trouble filling all races by next week."

Saturday's first post will be 1 p.m.

Esks Not Prepared For Gabler Switch

Cats Pull It Out With Last-Gasp Pass to Fleming

HAMILTON (CP)—Wally Gabler credits a little quirk in his offensive armor with his success at Ivor Wynne Stadium Thursday night in steering Hamilton Tiger-Cats to a dramatic 17-15 win over Edmonton Eskimos in Canadian Football League play.

The Hamilton quarterback, who got into the game with just 2:03 left on the clock, capitalized on the little-known fact to upset the Eskimo defences long enough to toss the decisive scoring pass to halfback Dave Fleming with just five seconds remaining.

"I usually roll to the right and Bill Danychuk (Ticats' offensive guard) saw that the Edmonton defences were slanting that way," said the University of Michigan grad who has also seen service in the CFL with Toronto Argonauts and Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

CHANGED DIRECTION

"When we got close in, I deliberately rolled to the left," a move that had the Eskimo defenders off guard and left Gabler sufficient time to take note of three potential receivers before lofting a deep pass to Fleming who had raced between two Edmonton players.

Hamilton coach Al Dorow made Gabler a surprise starter on the last sequence of plays after Joe Zuger had thrown his third interception of the game, the second theft by Edmonton's Mike Law, that led to an Eskimo touchdown with just over two minutes remaining.

Much of the credit for the Ticats' 11th-hour heroics must go to veteran Garney Henley who returned the ensuing Edmonton kickoff after Edmonton's go-ahead touchdown by fullback Bob (Hoss) Houmard.

The willowy speedster ran the ball back 35 yards to the Hamilton 47, virtually shaking off two would-be tacklers at the 25.

Almost overlooked in the exciting final five minutes of the game was the CFL career mark established by Tommy Joe Coffey, Hamilton's place-kicking-pass-catching end, in the first quarter.

Coffey entered the game just nine yards short of the career passing yardage record held by Hal Patterson, former Ticat and Montreal Alouette great. Coffey's first reception went for just over nine yards, surpassing Patterson's 9,473, and the Hamilton veteran went on to add 22 more yards to his record.

Coffey took an eight-yard scoring pass from Zuger at the goal line with just seconds remaining in the first quarter, converted, then added a 41-yard field goal at 5:10 of the second quarter to account for Hamilton's scoring at the half.

Zuger's erratic passing accounted for both Edmonton's touchdowns.

Law grabbed the ball out of the air after it had been tipped by Coffey and streaked 54 yards for the first score. Cutler converted.

Velox Rugby Club opens its season Sunday with first practice at 11 a.m. at Lambrick Park. Regular practices will be held Mondays and Wednesdays at 7 p.m., also at Lambrick.

Bill Polz gave all he could from both sides of the plate Thursday but his efforts proved in vain as Seaboard Construction handed Strathcona Hotel its 15th consecutive loss in the Major Men's Softball League's final game of the 1971 schedule.

Polz struck out three batters in a losing cause and connected for two of the Strathcona hits, including a solo home run in the third inning.

GOLF TEAM TOURNEY DELAYED BY WEATHER

LIGONIER, Pa. (AP) — A heavy, steady rain forced postponement of first-round play today in the $200,000 Professional Golfers' Association National Team championship.

The round was rescheduled for Friday, with another 18 holes set for Saturday and 36 holes for Sunday.

Only eight of the 64 two-man teams had started play on the Laurel Valley Golf Club course when play was held up. Officials waited about four hours, hoping the weather would clear, before announcing the postponement.

There was a forecast of a 50 per cent chance of continued rain Friday.

Three Sharing Alberta Lead

CALGARY (CP) — Texan Steve Lecrone of Amarillo grabbed a share of the first-round lead in the Alberta open golf championship by carving a four-under-par 66 Thursday on the Calgary Golf and Country Club course.

He was joined by Ernesto Perez of Tijuana, Mexico, and Bob Cox of Vancouver.

He never left himself a long putt—only once did he have to play from 20 feet — and missed only one green and never hit the rough.

Cox, was five-under par and ahead of the field after 16 holes but on the par-three 17th he drove over the green and into a bunker. He went one-over-par on the hole and on the following green was three inches short of sinking a 25-footer for a birdie.

One stroke back of the leaders were a half-dozen golfers, including Bill Wright Jr. of Edmonton and Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont. Norman had a four-under-par 31 on the back nine, despite three putting on two greens.

COURTANEY SHOOTS 67

Also at 67 were Al Courtaney and Bill Lytle of San Jose, Calif., Jerry Sheffield of San Diego and John Calabria of Rochester, N.Y.

For most of the 148 entrants, the first round was not difficult with 32 of them at par or below.

But the course promised to be tougher today as course marshals made pin placements more trying and set the tees farther back.

The tee was just right and the pin in the perfect place for Jim Loftus, 19, when he came to the eighth hole. His four-wood carried to the front of the green, skipped to the pin and rolled in for a 218-yard hole-in-one. The Calgary amateur had a 71 total.

Four golfers were tied at 68, including amateurs Bob Bradburn of Edmonton and Norman Gray of Calgary.

Tom McGinnis of Memphis, Tenn., who won the Saskatchewan open Sunday in a playoff, and John Elliott of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., who took the Manitoba open in a similar manner the week before, were also two under par.

The amateurs are shooting for a berth on the Alberta Willingdon Cup team. The four lowest qualify.

Mike Zichy of Edmonton and Mike Hogan of Red Deer had 69s and Don Graham of Medicine Hat 70. Loftus, Keith Alexander, Doug Silverberg and John Souter, all of Calgary shot 71.

He fired a par 70 and was in a big group which included Tom Moryson of Vancouver.

Bill Penny and amateur Al McLeod, both of Victoria, and Greg Palmer were at 72 along with Doug Robb of Vancouver and amateur Carl Schwantje of Victoria was at 74.

MEETING Thursday were Fred Hucul named new coach of Victoria Cougars' hockey club, and Lefty Gomez, former New York Yankee pitching star. Gomez will be guest speaker tonight at banquet which precedes Saturday's opening of Babe Ruth Pacific Section baseball tournament. Hucul's coaching appointment was announced Thursday. Cougars also announced Penticton Broncos of B.C. Junior League will be Victoria's tier two affiliate. (Times photo by Irving Strickland).

Karpiuk Topples Greaves

Terry Karpiuk struck out nine batters and issued only three bases on balls as Al's Home Service turned giant-killer Thursday night and toppled leading Greaves Movers 2-1 in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League encounter at Royal Athletic Park.

Victory boosted Al's into a tie for third place and the final playoff spot with only three league games remaining — Home and Gorge meet wice and the other remaining game pits Greaves against Farmers.

Defeat left Greaves only one game ahead of Farmers but league officials said Thursday night that the leaders have already clinched first place and a bye into the final as they hold a 5-3 advantage over the runner-up squad in meetings between the teams.

Second and third-place clubs will meet starting Aug. 13 in a best-of-three semi-final series. The final will be a best-of-five affair.

Walt Burrows hit a sacrifice fly to score Ralph Anderson and Russ Holmes singled in Don Burrows for Al's while John Yankowski scored for Greaves on a base on balls.

McDonald's Stop Saanich

Victoria McDonald's Bread slipped past Saanich 13-12 Thursday night in the opening game of the best-of-five South Vancouver Island Intermediate Lacrosse League playoff final at Memorial Arena.

Victoria took a 11-10 lead going into the third period after the clubs had battled to a 4-4 draw in the first 20 minutes.

Roger Hill led Victoria with five goals while Danny Green added three and Ken Daly chipped in two. Singles were contributed by Jeevan Dillon, Kim Bowles and Laurie Smith.

Second game of the series is scheduled for Sunday in Pearkes Arena and action will return to Memorial on Tuesday. Both games start at 8 p.m.

City Ball Fans Get Ruth Tourney Feast

Baseball fans in the Greater Victoria area will find an epicurean feast at Royal Athletic Park for the next week.

Nine teams of 16 to 18-year-olds will be battling in the Pacific Section Babe Ruth championship and a berth in the world series at Stamford, Conn., from Aug. 10 to 16.

Action begins Saturday and continues through to Thursday, or possibly Friday, in the double loss elimination contest.

Last year's Pacific champion, San Gabriel of Southern California, went on to win the world title. This year South Bay, approximately 50 miles outside of Los Angeles, carries the Southern California banner to Victoria.

Representing Northern California is a team from Fruitridge. The Sunshine State is the only one that has two berths in the Pacific tourney.

Carson City will be representing Nevada. Crater Lake carries Oregon hopes. Bellevue will be coming from Washington and Ketchican supplied the Alaska team.

Victoria, as the host centre, drew a bye into the competition and the British Columbia entry is Trail, which won the berth in come-from-behind fashion last weekend in Lake Cowichan.

All teams and tournament officials will get together for a banquet tonight at 7:30 in the Victoria Curling Club and tournament action begins at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Alaska and Southern California battle in the opener, Washington and Northern California meet at 3, Victoria tackles Guam at 6:30 and Trail faces Nevada at 8:30.

Oregon and the Guam-Victoria winner open a four-game schedule on Sunday beginning at 1 p.m. and with the same game times as Saturday.

Evening doubleheaders will begin at 6:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday. If the undefeated team loses in the 8:30 p.m. Thursday game, the final will take place at 6:30 Friday.

Tickets for the entire tournament cost $7 while two-game session tickets are being sold for $1.50.

Salmonbellies Upset By Coquitlam Squad

Bradshaw Wins Net Contests

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fourteen-year-old Glen Bradshaw of Victoria beat challengers in both the 14-and-under and 16-and-under events Thursday at the British Columbia junior closed tennis championships.

He edged Phil Moody, 16, of West Vancouver 7-5 and 6-3, then beat Jim Lees of Vancouver 6-2 and 6-4 in a semi-final of the 14-and-under flight.

Bradshaw will play Robert Bettauer of North Vancouver in the 16-and-under final today and Dave Becker of Vancouver for the 14-and-under title.

In the girls' play, Janet Hall of Vancouver repeated Bradshaw's feat, defeating Kim Tindle of Vancouver 6-3 and 6-0 in the 18-and-under class, then blanking Brenda Cameron of Victoria 6-0 and 6-0 in the 16-and under division.

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Second-placed Coquitlam Adanacs defeated first-place New Westminster Salmonbellies 17-13, in Western Lacrosse Association play Thursday before 1200 fans.

Coquitlam stifled repeated New Westminster attempts at rallies. The Salmonbellies pulled with in a single goal on three different occasions, after falling behind, 4-1, in the first period.

PAN-AM GAMES . . . . . OPEN TODAY

Heartbreak for Wendy

CALI, Colombia (CP) — "I cried a lot at first; then I got just plain mad."

Wendy Taylor, 20, pretty, blonde hurdler from Abbotsford, was out of the Pan-American Games before she had had a chance to compete.

The Games were to be opened today with the official ceremonies but the British Columbia hurdler won't be able to compete in her specialty — the 400-metre hurdles. She suffered a broken cartilege in her left knee while practising, Thursday.

Nearly 3,000 athletes from 30 countries are expected to take part in the Games, the first ever staged in Colombia, but all will not be on hand for the opening ceremony. Some athletes will arrive next week, when several sports are scheduled after the big track and field competition is out of the way. It starts Saturday.

Canada and Cuba have the largest teams at the Games — some 400 athletes and officials each — but the Americans are expected to win most of the 170 gold medals, as they did in Winnipeg, where their score was 120 gold.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

STEWART LANG Reports on The Outdoors

Once again, as happens every year, a particular combination of hot weather and poor tide conditions have conspired to make the latter part of this week "Dog days" as far as salmon fishing is concerned.

With the exception of Campbell River and Courtenay areas, where coho returns continue to abound, the fishing picture for both fresh and salt water around Vancouver Island is bleak.

But such was not the case at the beginning of the week — and might not be the situation a week from today.

Coho dominate the scene off Campbell River although a few springs in the 30-pound range have been taken in the same general areas. Morning fishermen have been lucky near the Ore Dock, Quathiaski Cove and April Point while the late afternoon anglers found a bountiful harvest of coho near Cape Mudge, the Bell Buoy and Butler Point.

Comox Bar, Little River and Point Holmes waters are producing coho that tip the scales around five pounds and some springs up to 30 pounds are still snatching bait and hardware off Bates Beach.

In the Duncan area, action has tapered off a little in the past few days after fishermen reported catching springs near Separation Point, through Sansum Narrows and in the outer part of Cowichan Bay by mooching or trolling flashtails.

Best news from southern Island waters this week involved the landing Tuesday of a 48:08-pound spring in Pedder Bay by Ontario visitor Leopold Sauloup. He was fishing along the kelp bed with approximately 125 feet of line and one and one-half pounds of weight.

Since then, however, action has tapered off.

A pod of killer whales moved past Victoria and Oak Bay on Monday to stir things up, leaving only a few spring returns in their wake.

* * * *

Among the exceptions is Cameron Lake, where fishermen have been landing trout on light-colored, deer-hair flies after sunset.

Other spots that might be worth a try are Upper and Lower Campbell lakes on troll and the Puntledge and Oyster rivers, where some sea-run cutthroat have been caught.

* * *

NIBBLES: With the fire situation in the woods now at the critical stage, it might be the time to exercise some extra caution . . . leave those "coffin nails" at home, besides eliminating the possibility of a carelessly tossed butt, it might provide the opportunity to breathe a little fresh air . . . any matches used should be rolled in the hand before being disposed of . . . if any spark remains, it will become immediately apparent.

Mike Kobierski of Sidney is embarking on his first venture into the recreation field with a simple device that should be in any salmon fishermen's tackle box . . . called an offset guide. It works like a planer but in a lateral direction rather than vertical . . . particularly useful for the boat with more than two anglers because it allows the use of more lines . . . it also reduces the risk of fouled lines and positions the lure far to the side of the wake of the boat, away from prop noise and oil fumes . . . through the use of a two-position control arm, the guide may be used on the left or right-hand sides of the boat . . . Kobierski notes that it is good for coho fishing and fishing with a fast trolling speed . . . the guides are now in the hands of the wholesalers and should be distributed next week.

Supporting Ranks Grow For San Diego Southpaw

By The Associated Press

There are several National League batters who probably would disagree with Pete Rose, but the two-time batting champion of Cincinnati Reds believes that Dave Roberts of San Diego Padres is the best left-handed pitcher in the league.

Sparky Anderson, the Reds' manager, not only agree, but goes even further. He says Roberts is the best pitcher—either right- or left-handed — that he has seen all season.

Roberts, owner of the National League's best earned run average among starting pitchers, lowered his ERA to 2.15 Thursday night, throttling the Reds 5-1 with a sparkling five-hitter.

"I've seen harder throwers," said Anderson, "but Roberts tonight was the best pitcher I've seen all year."

PIRATES WIN

Elsewhere, Pittsburgh Pirates battered Los Angeles Dodgers 8-4, St. Louis Cardinals downed New York Mets 3-1 in a game shortened to eight innings by rain, and Atlanta Braves defeated San Francisco Giants 4-2.

Roberts, obtained by the Padres for $200,000 in the October, 1968, expansion draft, was nicked for two hits and a run in the first inning on a single by Rose and a double by Lee May, then tied his club record by retiring the next 18 batters before yielding a one-out single to Tony Perez in the seventh. Two infield singles in the eighth were the only other Reds' hits off the 6-2, 200-pound Roberts, who didn't walk a batter and struck out five.

He threw only 64 pitches in the final seven innings for a total of 96.

Despite his impressive ERA, Roberts' record is only 8-11. Among his losses have been 1-0, 2-1, 3-1, 3-2, 4-3 and three 2-0 games.

Roberts, also a good hitter, made sure he got at least one run Thursday night, driving it in with one of his two hits. Dave Campbell chipped in with a pair of run-scoring doubles for the Padres.

The Pirates overcame an early 4-0 Los Angeles lead, with the help of Gene Clines' three-run homer, Bob Robertson's two-run blast and Willie Stargell's 33rd homer—tops in the majors and equalling his career high for a season.

Matty Alou's two-run tie-breaking triple in the sixth inning keyed St. Louis' victory over the Mets.

Zoilo Versalles, normally a light hitter, blasted two home runs, his second and third of the season, sparking the Braves' triumph over the Giants.

Fred Scherman, workhorse of Detroit Tiger bullpen, has another American League victory and the bruise to prove it.

THAT'S ONE WAY

Scherman took matters into his own hands Thursday night, getting hit by a pitch to force home Detroit's winning run in a 10-9 victory over Kansas City Royals.

It was the second straight night that a four-run ninth inning gave Detroit a victory over the Royals.

Elsewhere in the American, Milwaukee Brewers shut out Boston Red Sox 3-0, California Angels dropped Cleveland Indians 7-2 and Chicago White Sox blanked New York Yankees 4-0. Oakland Athletics at Baltimore Orioles and Washington Senators at Minnesota Twins were rained out.

Boston dropped its third straight against Milwaukee with Marty Pattin firing a four-hitter. Bill Voss homered for the Brewers and winless Luis Tiant dropped his fifth game for the Red Sox.

Chicago beat the Yankees for the fifth straight time with Tom Egan's two-run homer and a solo shot by Bill Melton providing the offence as Tom Bradley scattered nine hits for the victory.

FLOOD AND ASSOCIATE STRIKE OUT IN COURT

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Former outfielder Curt Flood and a business associate must pay $27,407 and $750 in lawyer fees to a couple from St. Louis County, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge William H. Webster said Flood and William M. Jones owe the money to Mr. and Mrs. Howard Foster for promissory notes.

The Fosters sold Flood and Jones a photography shop for the promissory notes. They were due in May.

Flood lost a $50,000 countersuit which contended the Fosters misrepresented facts when they made the sale.

Langford Clinches Tie for Top Spot

Last Canucks Eliminated In Net Battle

VANCOUVER (CP) — Second seded John Andrews of Fullerton, Calif., defeated Felix Ponte, former Davis Cup player from Peru 6-4, 6-3 Thursday in the quarter-finals of the Western Canadian Lawn Tennis championships.

The other Canadian, Susan Stone, also of Vancouver, went down 6-4, 6-2 in a match with Dodie Cheny of Santa Monica, Calif.

In the other two women's matches, Janet Adkisson of Seattle dumped Evelyn Houseman of Los Angeles 6-4, 6-2 while Lori Sherbeck of Fullerton, Calif., beat Mary Hill of Del Notre, Calif., 7-5, 6-1.

The men's quarter-finals saw Robyn Ray of Tacoma, Wash., easily beat Jack Neer of Irvington, 6-2, 6-3. Dick Night of Seattle beat Bob Schovers of Salt Lake City, Utah 6-7, 6-1, 6-2 and Bob Alloo of Berkeley, Calif., edged Tim Noonan of Palo Alto, Calif., 6-7, 6-1, 6-4.

Langford Drywall connected for 11 hits Thursday night to defeat Labatts 7-1 and clinch at least a tie for the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League pennant.

Terry Hamilton led the Langford hit-parade with two doubles for three trips to the plate, scoring twice and driving in one run.

Cox struck out four batters and didn't issue a base on balls for the shutout and the only hit was off losing-pitcher George Gladue in the third inning.

Black Panthers Regrouping Tattered Forces for Comeback

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Decimated by police raids, disarmed by their leaders and shorn of their black berets and jackets, the Black Panthers are regrouping their somewhat tattered forces and mounting a comeback.

"You'll be hearing a lot about the Panthers in the very near future," says Charles Garry, the 61-year-old white lawyer who has represented many Panthers, including National Chairman Bobby Seale, in court battles across the United States.

Panther sources say that fiery revolutionary rhetoric—part of the aura that captivated young white radicals—now will be taboo as will the brazen flurishing of weapons, which put quite a few Panthers behind bars.

Garry, now defending Panther leader Huey Newton in his retrial for the slaying of an Oakland, Calif., policeman, says the party now will concentrate on more community involvement and closer allegiance with white activists.

Free ghetto clinics and breakfast - for - schoolchildren programs — suspended in most areas during the relentless crackdown by police—will be resumed, along with new community projects.

During the party's first three years of existence, Newton, Seale and other Panther leaders openly called for the execution of policemen.

Never as ferocious as their rhetoric would seem to indicate, they were idolized by ghetto kids and young white radicals as they watched over police in the ghettos of Oakland, Chicago and other cities.

CLASHED VIOLENTLY

Nevertheless, there were violent clashes with police and a number of Panthers were shot and killed.

But, in the last year, there have been fewer encounters between police and Panthers.

Seale, one of the eight accused of conspiring to incite rioting in Chicago during the 1968 Democratic convention, was bound and gagged in court after repeated outbursts.

But he behaved differently in May when put on trial in New Haven, Conn., on murder and kidnap charges. He was a model of courtroom decorum, sharply upbraiding Panther supporters when they spoke out.

But the party does have its internal troubles. It appears to have split into two wings—one in New York under Seale, Newton and Panther Chief of Staff, David Hilliard, and the other under Eldridge Cleaver in Algeria.

Wild-Growing Vine May Curb Cancer

KINGSTON, Jamaica (Reuter) — Doctors here are experimenting with an old folk remedy to see whether it could ultimately contribute to the fight against cancer.

They are looking into the properties of cerasee, a vine which grows wild in Jamaica and is known throughout the Caribbean, although they stress that the public should not regard their work so far as any new hope for cancer sufferers.

For generations, Jamaicans have boiled the stem and leaves of the cerasee plant to make a medicinal tea or bath. It has been used since the days of slavery in the 18th and 19th centuries to treat wounds, piles, scabies and leprosy, for diseases of the spleen and liver, and as a means of inducing abortion.

Now a team of doctors is working with cerasee under the sponsorship of the University of the West Indies. First tests with leaves, sea urchins and rats showed slowing of their growth, the doctors reported.

Dr. Sam Street, one of the men who began the research, has said that although the work shows promise, "under no circumstances must it be considered that the findings so far mean that cerasee can either prevent or cure cancer."

Cerasee is found in back gardens all over Jamaica and is a favorite drink of rural islanders, who believe it is good for stomach pains and "building the blood."

The plant also bears a small pod-like fruit which is used by the Chinese in Jamaica as a vegetable.

Street, who is chief medical officer in the Jamaican health ministry and a part-time lecturer at the university, became interested in cerasee when treating a woman who had surgery for cancer of the gall bladder.

She had been given two years to live, but returned to the hospital 10 years later, with liver enlargement. Street noted that she had regularly drunk cerasee tea, but that the liver enlargement occurred while she was away from Jamaica—and cerasee—for four months. The woman later died.

Peacekeeper Role Again Necessary

By JOHN HAY

OTTAWA (CP) — The latest flare-up between Greek and Turkish Cypriots recalls the nearly-forgotten, Canadian peacekeeping force in the Mediterranean island country.

About 500 officers and men of the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, are among the 3,110-member United Nations force from nine nations, assigned to try to cool the conflict between the island's two factions. It is the last of Canada's major peacekeeping roles.

A Canadian, Gen. E. M. Leslie, is chief-of-staff of the force commanded by Gen. Prem Chand of India.

The UN force was put on blue alert this week—the lowest of three alert priorities—after exercises by the Turkish Cypriot militia along the green line that divides Greeks and Turks on the island.

Shots were exchanged between the two sides for the first time in four years Wednesday night. Smaller, localized shooting incidents occur every few months.

The UN force went to Cyprus in March, 1964, and now is the last remnant of the UN peacekeeping concept that was first applied in the Middle East in 1957, then in the Congo jungles in 1960.

The aim was to prevent outright war between Cyprus, Turkey and Greece, and permit the islanders to negotiate a settlement of their differences. The island joined the UN as a newly independent country in 1960.

WAR AVERTED

War was averted with the help of nearby NATO forces and diplomatic pressure from Britain and the U.S. on their NATO allies, Greece and Turkey.

But hostilities have recurred on the island throughout the lifetime of the force.

No Canadians on the force have been killed in military action, the defence department says, although several have died in accidents.

Since 1964, Canada has paid $22,620,000 in out-of-pocket expenses over and above normal pay and allowances of $32,766,000 to maintain its Cyprus force.

Of that extra, $3,408,000 has been recovered from the UN.

The total cost to the UN has been $128.5 million. Secretary-General U Thant recently issued another plea to UN members to help bail the organization out of the deficit created by the force.

DISPUTE CONTINUES

Once a UN force separates the combattants—as in the Middle East—they no longer feel the urgency of settlement, and the dispute smoulders indefinitely.

But when it was set up in 1964, the big powers on the Security Council made two significant changes in the Cyprus operation, learning from the Suez and Congo experiences.

They put a six-month deadline on its mandate. Every six months the council must review the operation of the force, then extend them if needed.

That was meant to prevent actions that sometimes trapped the Congo force in political and military chaos, and threatened to bring the U.S. and the Soviet Union into direct conflict.

Alberta Parties Unveil Platforms

By The Canadian Press

The campaign for the Aug. 30 Alberta provincial election began this week with pledges and proposals from the four provincial parties.

The New Democratic Party was first, with Leader Grant Notley opting for increased royalties on natural resources to raise money to provide more services to people.

"Reach out for people" is the NDP campaign slogan. And the party platform offers premium-free medical and dental care insurance, a government-run automobile insurance plan which would reduce premiums by 40 per cent, and public ownership of power and gas utilities, pipelines, gas reserves and major coal deposits.

Mr. Notley said it could be "pretty costly" to fulfil the NDP promises, but a socialist government would raise the money through such things as a road allowance tax and an export tax on natural gas.

For agriculture, the NDP promises a provincial land bank to enable farms to stay in the family, legislation to prevent corporate takeover of farmers, more bargaining power for farmers and incentive grants to preserve rural life.

The NDP would also eliminate residential property tax for education purposes, give more autonomy to local governments and establish a public day-care system throughout the province.

75 SEATS

NDP provincial secretary Hart Horn said the party, which now has 51 candidates, will have 63 by Aug. 9 and hopes to reach 73. Seventy-five seats will be up for grabs.

Mr. Notley was first with a platform, but Progressive Conservative Leader Peter Lougheed was ahead on the hustings, driving through a half-dozen central Alberta communities in mid-week.

Sections of the Conservative platform were released Tuesday, with the rest due during the next few weeks. Mr. Lougheed said the full platform places in perspective the challenges facing Albertans in the 1970s and specifies new directions a Conservative government in Alberta would take.

Among the main points:

—An Alberta bill of rights which would put individual rights before every other law of the province;

—Elimination of medical care insurance premiums, the education portion of the municipal property tax and provincial income tax on pension incomes for citizens over 65 years of age;

—Enable youth to actively participate in the creation of government policies which involve them;

'QUIET' ELECTION

Bob Russell, leader of the Liberal party, said the election "will be a quiet one" with the Social Credit party winning.

Mr. Russell said the main issue for the Liberals, who have nominated only nine candidates, will be jobs and the "quality of life."

He said that 18-year-olds, voting for the first time in a provincial election, will not make much difference to the outcome because "the large majority of young people don't come out and vote."

Harry Strom, seeking his first mandate as premier, got off to a slow start. He made the first major Social Credit policy statement Thursday night.

He said Social Credit will ensure the continued survival of the family farm by doubling the funds in the Alberta farm purchase board to $41 million, rebating 25 per cent of crop insurance premiums and by pressuring the federal government to adopt a two-price system for wheat.

If elected, the Conservatives also promised:

—To promote more direct participation by women in education content, social reform, cultural development, community recreation and law enforcement. Discrimination against the province's women would be ended.

—Provincial government support would be given for the most desirable incentives taken by city governments in avoiding urban transportation and traffic problems and urban pollution conditions.

—The quality of life, rather than growth for its own sake, would be emphasized and a matching-dollar approach would be taken to expand programs of support to cultural groups.

PROVIDE LOANS

—A fund of interest-free loans to municipalities for major recreation projects.

—An incentives plan to encourage new industrial and tourist facilities to locate in smaller centres and a $50-million fund to provide financial assistance to new or expanding enterprises.

—Reorganization of department of agriculture to shift the emphasis from production and extension to marketing and sales potential; restructuring of the Alberta marketing council to ensure control by producers and legislation to ensure that Crown lands are sold only to Canadians.

So far, there has been but a single verbal clash between Social Credit and Conservative front-runners in thecampaign.

Mr. Lougheed got in the first blow, terming it unfortunate that Lucien Maynard, a provincial judge and former Social Credit cabinet minister, was named chairman of a commission into provincial-municipal financing.

REQUIRES INDEPENDENCE

"It is essential that the royal commission be entirely independent of party political influence, both in appearance and fact," the Conservative leader said.

In reply, Municipal Affairs Minister R. Fred Colborne said the study had been urgently requested by the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association and the three commission members are "the best men for the job . . ."

Mr. Colborne noted that Mr. Lougheed did not complain about the appointment of Ross Ellis, town manager in Hinton and a former Liberal-Conservative member of the legislature. The other member is J. M. McKay of Calgary, chairman of the Alberta Hail and Crop Insurance Corp.

The commission is to examine and make recommendations by 1973 on the division of financial responsibilities and revenue sources between the province and municipalities.

DIARY NOTES

O, Magic Moment —A Tiger Crows

★ ★ ★

Dear Diary: If it ever got out, of course I'd surely be accused of disloyalty, but I've been wondering if we shouldn't hurry to the nearest kindergarten and start recruiting editorial staff.

There's this children's program called Mister Rogers' Neighborhood on the Public Broadcasting Service (Channel Nine) and when they had Astronaut Al Worden on it, just before he and his buddies shot into the wild blue yonder, I chanced to be viewing it in my tame, grey living room.

The questions all came from boys and girls of no more than six or seven years of age. I must have seen and read dozens of incomprehensible, jargon-ridden interviews with astronauts. Now, for the first time, one of them was being asked the things I've always wanted to know. How do you 'go potty' up there? Do you have to go to the moon? Are you ever scared? Do astronauts ever cry?

Major Worden suddenly became a warm and vulnerable human being. The voyage of Apollo 15 became a trip to which any man or child might relate. A breakthrough in journalism, no less.

Dear Diary: My relationship with Tiger, which has been absorbing me so these past weeks, reached a critical plateau this morning. My wife accused me, only half in jest, of having elevated him to the role of alter ego. How ridiculous! How simply preposterous!

True, I seem to spend a surprising amount of time out there by the chicken run. Still, that was true even before Tiger's arrival. The very day we brought home the six hens from Derek Pethick's place I knew that they were going to be soothing additions to my life. No more than four months old, Derek said, but what fine big sassy hens they were, even then, a rust-orange cross-breed, a blend, you might say, designed to be hardy and to lay vast numbers of splendid brown eggs.

It would be September, Derek said, before we could expect that particular miracle, but I didn't care. How restful it was, after a hard day at the office, leaning on the gate, nibbling a piece of straw, just watching them, gossiping among themselves, sometimes being quite mean to each other, doing their daft little Latin-American rhumba of scratching, running to me, wide-legged, on their sinister ungainly yellow talons, when I cast some grain. As tranquillizers alone they were worth the investment.

Tiger came into this serene, all-girl world by chance. Dave, our neighbor, said he had this little white rooster, just born. Would we like him when he was ready to leave his mother? Mother, as it happened, soon decided that, rejecting him quite callously, "Out!" she cried. A minute later Dave gently lifted Tiger from his chicken run into ours.

The ensuring real-life drama lasted no more than three minutes at the most. Tiger stood at the fence looking back to his heartless mother, a lonely, wistful, crestfallen outcast. The six big goofy hens pressed about, consumed with curiosity, bunting and crowding, each twice his size. Tiger gave one last, longing, pleading glance to his mother. Turning, with a long, shuddering sigh, he exploded. Whap! Zap! Zowie! The hens went flying, rust-orange feathers every which way. Then Tiger leaped to the top of the compost heap, threw back his little head, and crowed. A falsetto, a hesitant crow, to be sure, but altogether magnificent.

Since then things have settled down into a fixed pattern, a society, really. Tiger is in charge. The six fat gossiping hens are mean to each other and do their daft little rhumba, but always with a wary, respectful, anticipating eye on The Master, who often takes a run at them just for hellery. At night he occupies the roost above their roost, gazing down upon them with regal, malevolent eyes. Any day now—and don't think I won't be there—he will finalize the arrangement.

My father-in-law and I stand out there quite a lot, I concede. Sometimes when Tiger sends them all scurrying we grin at each other, sometimes even nudge each other in the ribs. But alter ego? How ridiculous! How simply preposterous!

Dear Diary: On hand today the second issue of the revived Liberty magazine, containing original articles clear back to 1932, and, like the resurrection of the Saturday Evening Post, a reminder of the mighty, untapped power of nostalgia.

The magazine's editors suggest, indeed, that it could be the overriding emotion of the 70s: "Let's face it, Nostalgia is a form of running away from today and, so far, today hasn't been a very bad day to run away from." A valid point, perhaps, except that every generation — perhaps even this one — always looks back on the past 20 or 30 years ago, however grim, as "The Good Old Days."

Supposing, each day, that the Times of exactly 30 years ago was distributed to our subscribers and the press run of today's paper was stored away for distribution 30 years hence. The very worst news could be digested without anxiety, sure in the knowledge that it was all passed, that we all survived in spite of every crisis. Instant Nostalgia! Swell! Keen! The Cat's Pyjamas!

Addiction Afflicts India, Too

The growth of drug addiction and alcoholism among young people is not confined to the western world, according to His Holiness Sant Amar Singh of Baroondi, Punjab, India.

Sant, visiting Victoria with five Sikh holy men, says India is faced with similar problems. He attributes this to the lack of divine knowledge.

"Man's mind tends towards the negative aspects of life which invariably leads to suffering and sorrow," he said. "It is only through divine knowledge that man can attain happiness and peace."

The party is on a world tour to bring the message of Guru (teacher) Nanak, founder of the Sikh religion, who emphasized compassion and service to mankind.

The group met Premier Bennett after holding in Vancouver a baptism of Sikhism, the first ceremony of its kind held in British Columbia.

The six holy men strongly opposed use of tobacco and the drinking of wine.

"We recognized the harmful effects of tobacco 300 years ago," Sant said.

Durgadev Singh Nindra, secretary of the party, said pollution, the destruction of wildlife and the use of chemicals to stimulate the growth of vegetables, should concern everyone.

"We leave wildlife alone," he said. "Animals have as much right to live as man."

He added vegetables produced artificially never fully mature and do not contain the same food values.

"Man needs to get closer to nature," he said. "He can achieve this through prayer, meditation and self-discipline."

The party leaves Friday for Paldi, near Duncan, where they will attend a service at the Sikh Temple.

On Saturday and Sunday they will be at Lake Cowichan and on Monday at Port Alberni. They will return to Vancouver before proceeding to Toronto and Montreal.

Rogue MLA to Make Decisive Trek to Interior

By BRUCE YEMEN

The political future of Dr. Scott Wallace, Social Credit MLA for Oak Bay, may be decided in the next few weeks.

Wallace said Thursday he will weigh his future while on a holiday beginning next week. Oddly enough, he said, he will be going to Kelowna — Bennett country.

The MLA's frustration at the role of a backbencher in the government party has been freely expressed since his election in August, 1969.

But the events in the past few weeks have virtually "forced" him to consider other possibilities than simply leaving politics, he said Thursday.

His earlier feeling that he would simply retire from politics was based on a lack of action by the government on his proposals for wider health services including government aid for intermediate care.

"Now I am deeply distressed by positive action taken by the government in the wrong fields," Wallace said, referring to a cabinet order giving Health Minister Ralph Loffmark power to deny doctors hospital privileges and another requiring medical laboratories to be licensed.

"I am almost being compelled into considering other political ambitions," said Wallace, adding he is now concerned with the need to fight the cabinet's "tendency toward dictatorship" as shown in recent actions.

●

The MLA said that "from a conscience point of view" it would bother him to think that people regarded a decision to leave politics as simply the action of a man who didn't get his way.

He indicated his current feelings about the Social Credit government would be improved considerably if the cabinet rescinds the controversial order giving Loffmark power over doctors' hospital privileges.

The regulation is not only dangerous from the power it gives the minister but it is likely to create many more medical problems than it would ever solve, Wallace said. A shortage of doctors in B.C. could be the eventual result.

Wallace said the grassroot reaction has been sympathetic to his viewpoint and critical of the government.

"The man in the street just doesn't go for this sort of thing," Wallace said.

In the past, Wallace has dismissed any suggestions that he could serve a useful purpose sitting in the legislature as an independent MLA or as a member of another party. His aim, he said, was to help improve government policy from within.

But it is no secret that the B.C. Conservative party would like to have a representative in the legislature.

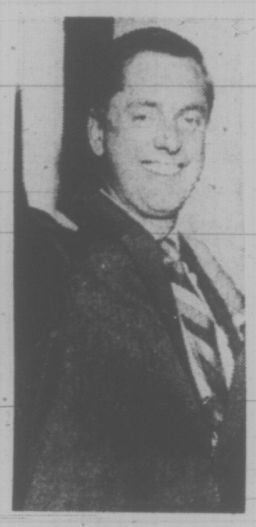
Some political observers feel the Oak Bay constituency would be ideal for a popular candidate of an independent frame of political mind. The riding remained Liberal for years despite efforts by Premier Bennett to get a member elected there.

●

The Socreds didn't succeed until Wallace came along.

Asked about Wallace's announced reconsideration of his position in the party, Bennett said this week:

"He made the decision to come in and he can make the decision to go out, I guess. I hope he stays."



— WALLACE
. . . to quit Socreds?

Q: What is the address of Jack Webb, the actor? Is he really interested in combatting crime or are his homilies on such programs as Dragnet merely part of his actor's role?—A.L.W.

A: You can write Webb at Universal City Studio, University City, Calif. We suggest you ask him about his interest in combatting crime.

CITY'S FIRST NAME?

Lost Letter May Settle Old Issue

By PETER McNELLY

A missing letter from Queen Victoria to Charles Ross — the man who built Fort Victoria — could become the property of the provincial archives and settle a long-standing controversy over the fort's first name.

The letter, along with nine others, has been willed to the archives by Maud Wren, Ross' great-granddaughter. Miss Wren died Feb. 9, 1970, in Roy, Washington, a small town about 18 miles south of Tacoma. She was 84.

The estate's executor, Tacoma lawyer A'lan Hutchison, told the Times today he was instructed in the will to recover the letters and give them to the archives.

The nine other letters are at the offices of the Washington State Historical Society and have been there since 1916.

Hutchison said Miss Wren loaned the letters and spent much of her later years trying unsuccessfully to get them returned to her.

She said he has a copy of a letter from Edwin E. Murray, Miss Wren's first cousin, stating the letters belong to Miss Wren.

They were given to her by her aunt, the daughter of Flora Ross Hobbs, who was Charles Ross' daughter.

Was It Camosun or Fort Albert?

Hutchison said the letter from Queen Victoria was addressed to Charles Ross and told him to build "Fort Albert" at the location of what is now the City of Victoria.

Historian Derek Pethick who wrote Victoria, The Fort, says the issue of whether Victoria ever had other names has not been fully proved.

One chronicle (Canada and Its Provinces) states the fort originally was called Camosun, an Indian name meaning "place for gathering camass," a lily.

In 1845, says Pethick, the name was changed to Fort Albert and then to Fort Victoria in 1846. However, these dates are not necessarily correct.

Hutchison said most of the other letters deal with mundane subjects such as invoices and accounts. He said Miss Wren had loaned the Queen's letter to an old friend, Edith Sokolik, who is still living.

Miss Wren's will stated the letter was kept in a tin box in her friend's house. Hutchison said he inspected the box but did not find the letter.

But he said he has reason to suspect Mrs. Sokolik still has it somewhere.

Charles Ross was an employee of the Hudson's Bay Company who was commissioned to come to Victoria in 1843. He supervised construction with his assistant Roderick Finlayson.

Ross' health had been bad for many years, and he died June 27, 1844. Hutchison said Ross apparently gave the letters to one of his daughters, who later became Miss Wren's aunt.

She Was a Cantankerous Woman

Hutchison said the Ross and Wren families are deeply involved with the history of the Pacific Northwest, their members having lived in Utah, Oregon, Washington and B.C.

He also shed some light on the geneology of Ross' wife, Isabella, who he said was born on an island on the St. Lawrence River of part Indian origin.

Miss Wren, he said, was a cantankerous woman who became famous in the Tacoma area for her and her brother's battles with the state highway department.

The will also left other historical items to the archives here. These include: daguerreotypes, a large two-gallon crock which belonged to John Ross, Charles' brother, a dress borrowed from England which was to have been worn at an 1845 function honoring Sir James Douglas and other old English dresses.

Her will states all these items should be left to Victoria, "not only because of the difficulty I have had with the state of Washington, but also because the Ross family is connected intimately with the city of Victoria in British Columbia and because Charles Ross was instrumental in founding said city."

Hutchison said part of the controversy in the will rests in the fact that another Ross family member, E. K. Murray, is on the board of directors of the Washington State Historical Society.

Hutchison said Murray maintains the society should retain possession of the letters.

Hydro Bus Loads Drop

The number of passengers carried on B.C. Hydro buses in Victoria and Vancouver dropped 16.2 per cent in the year ended March 31.

The annual report of the crown corporation, released today, showed 65.9 million passengers carried compared with 78.7 million in the previous year. The latest year was the lowest in the last 10 years.

"The decrease in passengers carried reflects normal resistance to a fare increase, the impact of generally unsettled economic conditions and the suspension of urban transit services caused by a strike of members of the Amalgamated Transit Union," the report said.

"The combination of the strike, which occurred from Jan. 4 to Feb. 5, and extremely adverse weather conditions forced transit patrons to form car pools or travel by private automobiles.

"These alternative transportation arrangements are continuing to have an unfavorable effect on usage of B.C. Hydro transit services."

Gross revenue from urban transportation, excluding the province's $2 million subsidy, amounted to $15.3 million compared with $15.2 million in the year before.

Fares were increased to 25 cents from 20 cents April 1, 1970.

The report said the new contract agreement with the Amalgamated Transit Union will "add further" to heavy operating losses.

The amount of operating losses was not stated in the report.

AN ENTRENCHED MEDICAL profession has fallen foul of an authoritarian provincial government and, as usual when the mighty disagree, the poor damned subservient taxpayer with his aches and pains can expect to be the loser.

As usual, both participants in the dispute profess to have his best interests at heart.

Government, which seems determined to establish political control over the profession, demonstrates its asserted concern by an order-in-council power play. The individual medico may be granted or denied hospital privileges by Social Credit Health Minister Loffmark. (Where this could leave the patients of a disallowed doctor is a matter for interesting, if grim, speculation.)

A big gun from the medical side has boomed a response. The gist of it is that the new regulation might force British Columbia doctors to opt out of medicare, billing their patients direct and leaving them to wangle their costs from government's Medical Insurance Commission.

Weighing challenge and reply, the only suggestion I can offer to any bewildered citizen is this:

Live right . . . guard your health . . . and if overtaken, hope for an ailment that will yield to a dosage of aspirin from the bathroom medicine cabinet.

I respect and admire the working doctor. But en masse, in his associations, he is a chump. Otherwise, he would long ago have beaten the Bennett government to the punch — and perhaps retained control of his professional future — by making certain moves.

He would have clamored long, loud and continually for a training system and facilities that would have ensured an adequate supply of B.C.-trained medical school graduates.

He would also have pressed hard for subsidization by government and his profession of medical training, in return for which the trainee would contract to serve for a specified time in any provincial area to which he might be assigned.

Having been caught flat-footed by this Social Credit coup, I trust the profession won't let an understandable sense of outrage lead it into stupidities that would reduce the less than ample supply of goodwill that doctors command.

To opt out of medicare, for instance, would be to present Canada's shrewdest and most effective politician with carte blanche for further restrictive measures. The most obvious of these strikes me as a downward revision of doctors' fees — a move that would be widely greeted with chuckles and smiles.

To avoid any possible misunderstanding, that shrewdest politician is not Loffmark but Premier William Andrew Cecil Bennett, the master puppeteer who controls the strings of Socred government in British Columbia.

And much as I dislike to be pessimistic, I retain an almost superstitious conviction that Mr. B. will be tweaking those strings for at least another term after this present one.

There's little point, either, in expecting that charges of dictatorial procedure will induce this government to reverse its course. A club has been placed in the health minister's hands, and there I expect it will remain.

There is, however, a ray of light. The medical profession in B.C. may have lost a round, but not necessarily the battle. Castle Bennett isn't completely impregnable. Should Loffmark be permitted to undertake more than token use of this new weapon, the rebound could do considerable damage to the father-image which is his party, chief's prime vote-catcher.

Disallow a doctor the use of a hospital in the community where his shingle hangs, and a question that could prove politically embarrassing at once arises.

What about those patients?

The too-silent profession could best help itself at this junction by downing a prescription.

If it is true that outer British Columbia is short of doctors, let the association do what it can to change the picture.

And, as ethical men, don't make the mistake of looking for ethics in government. All you'll find there is political expediency.

TODAY MEN ARE WORKING HARDER — AND DYING SOONER

How to Counteract the Stress and Strain of Business

● Never has the pace of big business been so fast or so killing. This is the last of three articles telling women how they can help men alive and well through the increasingly dangerous middle years.

By STELLA BRUCE

NEW YORK (WNS) — We've all seen him — the grey-faced, exhausted husband slumped in his armchair after "a terrible day at the office . . ." and we've thought to ourselves: if this is what chasing a promotion means, do we really want him to get his name on the boss's door?

Never has the pace of big business been so fast and so killing. Never since the days of sailing ships have businessmen been separated so much from their wives as they are today.

And it's no secret that many marriages can't stand the strain.

"The firm is taking the place of the 'other woman' in the so-called eternal triangle," says an industrial psychologist, "and latest studies have shown that work can now absorb up to 80 per cent of the time and energy of men in the executive bracket."

No wonder men are falling prey to the diseases of stress and strain in unprecedented numbers. No wonder firms are insisting that a meeting with the applicant's wife is an essential part of every interview for a top job.

They want to make sure that the embryo executive has a woman strong enough, sympathetic enough, to give him the help and support he undoubtedly will need.

Women Tougher

For women, as a race, are tougher than men. They may worry and nag, but they are far more adept at meeting stress and adjusting to trying living conditions.

They "roll with the punches" like boxers, while men usually take life's pummeling squarely on the chin. Under pressure and tension they fight harder and die sooner than their wives — about six years sooner in fact.

If men could only learn to handle stress without getting into such a state, they would take an important step in the right lifeline. And women, the experts agree, are the ones to help them.

You can, it seems, literally put years on your husband's life by simply helping him to counteract the stress and strain that modern business imposes on those with ambition.

Hard Way

Sometimes, men have to learn the hard way. A business consultant told me of a senior executive who suffered a nervous breakdown after months of working flat-out on a big development project.

"I went on leave to recover," the executive said, "but I couldn't sleep or even relax without the aid of drugs. Slowly I learned how to use will-power to get things into perspective.

"But it was only the help of my wife that really pulled me through."

Some companies realize only too well what the strain of modern business can do to a man. "We're ruining a lot of families," said the medical officer of a large industrial combine.

"Our welfare department offers psychiatric services, but we're not really geared to handle serious mental problems."

So it is the family — and particularly the wife — which is left with the job of keeping a businessman fit and happy. "If husband and wife can talk about the problems that work brings, they're at least halfway toward solving them," says an industrial psychologist.

He cites one case involving a young executive who decided to leave the house an hour early so that he could return before the children were in bed and spend some time with his complete family.

He promised

He also promised that he wouldn't work on Saturdays and that he wouldn't bring work home on more than two nights a week.

"One of the worst aspects of present-day high-pressure business is the resentment generated in wives who believe that husbands always put their work first regardless of the consequences," says Dr. Morton Begley, an industrial psychologist retained by several major firms.

"Certainly, the demands of executive status have increased relentlessly in recent years. Today's executives not only must work harder and longer at the office but they're also required to spend more time out of town.

"Indeed, one poll showed that the average executive can now spend up to 30 per cent if his working life on the road, which means he will be away some nights and his wife will have to manage on her own."

This tug-of-war between a man's loyalty to his family and his obligation to his job is becoming one of the major psychological problems of the 20th century.

Must Decide

"Early in the marriage a couple must decide on priorities," says Dr. Begley. "Is the husband to go all out for material success, thus neglecting his family? Or is he to limit his ambition and play a larger part in home life?

"If he chooses the latter course, it is then grossly unfair to the wife to complain of a lack of material possessions. But this does happen.

Another danger is the gap between husband and wife which can widen as he continues to rise in company circles.

"In many cases, he is so driven by his work that he regards home primarily as some sort of rest centre in which he can recover from the relentless pressure of his work.

So what can a wife to to keep both a happy marriage and a stress-free husband? Primarily, to accept the sort of man he is and taylor family life to his basic qualities — and shortcomings.

Help him keep a sense of proportion. When he comes home at night limp with worry after a row with the boss, suggest — by example rather than words — that there is more to life than an office desk and a sheaf of sales reports.

Encourage Him

Encourage him to develop outside interests. Let him enjoy family life: he's playing his part by bringing in the money, so he shouldn't have to spend the entire weekend with his hands in the sink.

Suggest a few simple relaxation exercises. For instance, get him to lie on his back with hands at his sides, and eyes closed. Ask him to direct his attention to wriggling his toes!

After a few seconds of this, the focal point of attention should gradually come up the less, through the body, until it is level with the face.

Resting lazily in this state, the body will surrender to feelings of physical heaviness. This is called "deep relaxation," used by mystics as the first stage in acquiring their extraordinary powers of mental control.

Relaxation is not easy. It needs to be learned but it's well worth the effort. A short session every day can help relieve the tension on which ulcers, migraine, and a variety of nervous disorders thrive and prosper.

Gloomy Lot

Husbands are a gloomy lot. By your own lighthearted approach to life show yours that there's more in the world than bills, promotion prospects and life insurance.

"I remind my businessman patients," says a doctor specializing in industrial stress, "that the Coronary Medal of Honor is too easily won to make it really worth the effort."

Yet Coronary Medals are being dished out in frightening numbers every day of the week. It's up to you and me to see that the names of our husbands aren't on them.

Big Claims Expected

EDMONTON (CP) — Agriculture Minister H. A. Ruste said Thursday government insurance payments to central Alberta farmers who sustained crop losses in a severe hailstorm last week are expected to total nearly $2 million.

More than 1,000 claims have been received so far and more are expected, the minister said.

The Alberta hail studies group at Penhold said the storm was probably the worst since the early 1950s and predicted that crop and property damage could exceed $10 million.

Ruste said his department is still surveying the damage.

He said an estimated 70 per cent of the farmers in the storm area had some kind of insurance coverage.

Fashion—from the drawing boards in Paris to Victoria?

Well, not quite.

But designers' whims have been to the imagination of the young—and the young at heart. No longer does the word "fashion" conjure up pictures of runways in Rome, drawing boards in Paris and elegant models in London.

Fashion has hit the streets. That's fashion's runway now. Imagination has become the drawing board and everyday people are the models.

Exhorbitant prices and limited style selection have resulted in a closet search and small shop chase to find the shirt, blouse, accessory or bag needed for that individual look.

Victoria, never noted as a fashion centre, has had years of experiment with fashion imagination.

Take Advantage

A quick noon-hour survey of the city centre on a sunny day shows that most people are taking advantage of today's fashion edicts, which in turn enhance city streets.

The working girl, in her 20s, rushing along crowded streets, clearly outclasses everyone else. With her colorful, stylish clothes, she quickly does away with that old "working girl" image.

Hot pants are plentiful, but usually they're reserved for those with svelte figures. Sunglasses, swinging shoulder bags and sharp shag hair cuts usually accompany these not-so-tight hot pant outfits.

Sunny, short dresses, sandals and scarves cover other working women under 30. Those interviewed said Vancouver and Seattle styles were more enticing than those in Victoria, but added that the situation here is improving.

Hippies, casually dressed youths and transients wore brightly colored clothes—not suitable for an office, but comfortable in the sun and attractive on the streets.

Played Music

They walked, talked and played music, looking more comfortable than anyone else. Their babies were carried in vibrant papoose-style carriers, worn on the back or front of the mother.

T-shirts were a focal point. Striped or plain, they were all bold, revealing many obviously bra-less females.

Businessmen—young and old—displayed a keen fashion sense, too. Some wore lightweight, pale-colored suits, with bright shirts and wide ties. White shoes weren't scuffed or marked.

Tourist couples could be easily spotted by their notably bright sportshirts, Bermudas, shifts and, in many cases, large straw hats. Cameras are always a dead give-away.

London Chef Seeks 'Typical' Canadian Dish

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — Silvino Trompetto, master of the Savoy Hotel kitchens, is off to Canada in August hoping he can bring back a typical Canadian dish for the gourmets of London's top-ranking hotel.

But what is typically Canadian?

"Maybe it will have something to do with maple syrup," said the starched-white maitre chef des cuisines in all innocence as he worried over his first venture into Canadian gastronomy.

The London-born Trompetto, whose ancestors dominated the kitchens of Italy, hopes to do a little lecturing and broadcasting in Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto, disclosing some of his own magic while picking up Canadian secrets.

Trompetto is not too sure what he will find. He figures that because of Quebec and the French influence, the standards of Canadian dining halls must have a strong Norman influence.

PREFERS CLASSICS

"Perhaps dishes will have garnishes of apple and cream and the food may be on the heavy side," he offered, none too sure of his ground.

His own leanings are towards the classics, the traditional recipes of Europe which have spread mainly from France which Trompetto, married to a Frenchwoman, maintains is still the true seat of food culture.

Supervising a taff of 20, Trompetto directs the production of perhaps up to 3,500 meals a day to Savoy guests. And then when he gets through a long day, he may slip off home to prepare a meal for his wife and 24-year-old son.

"I enjoy cooking," said the well-built chef with a characteristic face made more individualistic by a slightly mis-shapen nose.

As a child on London streets, he bashed his nose. But the skill of a surgeon restored the contours with almost the same mastery as Trompetto's own ability in the kitchen.

All the Savoy chefs are men. "Women," said Trompetto, "are good cooks but men are better in organization and stamina."

NO FROZEN FOOD

Every year hundreds of youngsters besiege him for a chance to learn in the Savoy kitchens. He picks those he considers the best, teaching while he supervises.

"Here at the Savoy we do not bother with modern ideas," he said. "We bring in our meat from Aberdeen and our vegetables from France. I do not believe in frozen food."

His own preference is for caviar and fish but he tries to design his dishes to fit the personalities of the guests. He tastes everything that is cooked in the kitchens and eats one complete meal a day, in a little office off the main restaurant kitchen.

DEAR ABBY...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for three years (no children) and I just can't stand my husband anymore. Why does a woman lose her individuality when she gets married? I think the younger generation has the right idea. They live together for a while, and then decide whether they should marry. I wish my husband would do something to make up my mind for me. If I were told I had some fatal disease and had only a few years to live, I would walk out and enjoy life. I would have many affairs with different men and really enjoy it. My problem is, I don't have any fatal disease. — Wants Out.

DEAR ABBY: The above letter was written by my wife. I wasn't snooping. It was left in plain sight. For the last six months my wife has been distant and cold. I begged her to go to a counselor and even told her I would go with her but she said nothing was the matter. I love her very much and don't want her to leave me. What do you advise me to do? — Heartbroken husband.

DEAR HUSBAND: Your wife wrote a "Dear Abby" letter hoping (perhaps unconsciously) you'd find it. Tell her she is free to go. And she doesn't need a fatal disease to provide an excuse.

DEAR ABBY: My husband had a vasectomy two years ago. Three months later I was pregnant! Can you imagine how we felt with two kids in high school, one in college and a daughter about to be married?

When my husband went back to the doctor who performed it, he was reminded that he was instructed to return for a test to determine the success of the operation. Well, my husband didn't think it was necessary to return, so he can't blame the doctor.

Once in a blue moon the operation fails, so please advise men who have vasectomies to go back for the test before they take any foolish chances. — Lucky In L.A.

DEAR LUCKY: All chances are foolish. But I suppose some are more foolish than others. Thanks for the tip.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for three years and in all that time he has refused to wash out the bathub after himself. He feels that is a wife's duty! I told him I didn't expect him to get down on his hands and knees and scrub it as I do, I just wanted him to rinse it out. He refused.

Last night at a family gathering in our home, my husband was asked by my sister if he washed the tub out when he was single and living at home where his mother cleaned the house. His answer was, and I quote, "Yes, I washed the tub. Do you think I would have my mother get down on her hands and knees and clean my dirty bathub?"

Abby, where does that leave me? Wife, Mother and Servant.

DEAR SERVANT: It leaves you on your hands and knees cleaning your husband's dirty bathub. Unless you refuse. And if you do, it might leave you with a very dirty bathub.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WHERE DID WE GO WRONG" IN WHEELING, W. VA.: From your letter I would say you did your best. Some parents "train up a child in the way he should go," and out of sheer rebellion, the child deliberately departs from it.

Young people seeking admission to Victoria's new Camosun College are being counselled by those of their own age.

"Their peers," as Gordon Hartley, director of student services, puts it. "In this preliminary stage they are far more apt to talk freely of prospects and problems to someone their own age than to senior counsellors," he said.

Applications for admission forms are filled out and all relevant official documents needed are attached with a $10 application fee. Once the form is processed, a notice of eligibility is received by the applicant. That notice is then presented through the college office and the prospective student receives counselling.

The service includes four full-time seniors and four young counselling aides. They are from the Institute of Adult Studies and are specially trained for the work.

Service is free, informal, and with no obligation to enrol. Previous standings of the applicants are evaluated, friendly advice given, suggestions made as to courses and the way smoothed for further counselling, if that should be necessary.

Having received counselling and been issued a permit, the prospective student is then ready for registration. That takes place the first three days of September, with classes commencing on September 7.

Hartley says: "We strongly advise early counselling and program decision. And, to make it easier for those who have summer work, starting next Monday the college office (in the building with the clock tower) will be open 9 to 4:30 during the day and again from 6:30 to 9 at night."

Speaking in general terms of Camosun College programs, Mr. Hartley tells you "there has never been anything comparable in this city before.

"Everything ever offered by the Institute of Adult Studies will still be offered, and a great deal more. We intend to be all things to all people. There will be classses day and night, 12 months of the year."

He points out that any person, regardless of age or background, will be able to register for "some course." They can start in September, stop at Christmas, and pick up again months later, if they wish.

On top of this, first and second year university courses are available. Also, through affiliation with the B.C. Institute of Technology, there is a first year BCIT course, and negotiations are under way to bring Victoria's vocational school into the college plan."

"We have an open door policy," Mr. Hartley concluded. "We welcome young or old, male or female, academic or non-academic, employed or unemployed who wish to resume or to continue some phase of education."

Then he repeated, "it is important, however, to fill in an application early and receive counselling now in order to be ready for the first semester in September."

★ ★ ★

According to a Victoria alderman I must be one of "a few people who get uptight about things." He was speaking at a city committee meeting where the proposal to erect three high-rise towers on our downtown waterfront was finally designated as unacceptable.

Certainly I raised my voice through this column in protest over such a proposal. Certainly, as this alderman describes it, I did get "uptight."

What I will not agree to, however, is that I was amongst only "a few." There are thousands of people in the Greater Victoria area against such a development and their collective sigh of relief when the decision of the committee was made public, was audible throughout the city.

If the decision is confirmed by a full council meeting then the way will be clear to inaugurate a plan more in keeping with the general outline of the harbor area and with long-term ideas for its development — as an asset to our unique environment and not as a carbon copy in cement of most cities today.

Asthmatic Child Suffers More When Parents Heavy Smokers

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — Parental smoking may worsen symptoms in asthmatic children, two Rochester, Minn. doctors suggest.

And, as expected, the effect is usually worse in homes where both parents smoke, according to a survey.

For example, more than half of some 400 asthmatic children questioned in a survey said that tobacco smoke irritated them.

Drs. Edward J. O'Connell and George B. Logan report that in 18 of 20 homes where smoking exposure stopped, the patient's symptoms improved.

"We advise parents not to smoke in their child's bedroom, in the car with the child, or in a room where the child is sitting," they said, according to the Medical Tribune. "We often tell them they must choose between their own pleasure and their child's health."

May Be Back

The controversial NTA, the phosphate replacement voluntarily dropped by detergent manufacturers last December when linked to birth defects in rats and mice, may be back in the washday water yet.

A Swedish research team reported earlier this year that the continuous use of NTA cannot be considered to constitute such medical risks to humans that it should be prohibited. The report to the National Swedish Health and Welfare Board was based on experiments and scientific calculations.

The Swedish scientists conclude that NTA has a low allergenic effect and that it is "unlikely that there should occur genetic damage or exist any increased risk of fetal abnormalities or cancer." They believe the conclusion is valid for longtime use of the chemical.

The research group stresses that more research will have to be done, particularly on the known corrosive effects of NTA and on its chelating properties which allow it to bind with heavy metals such as mercury and cadmium.

But despite such research deficiencies at present, "the team finds no reason to oppose the use of NTA as a component in laundry detergents."

Swedish scientists were the first to develop NTA as a replacement for phosphates, used in detergents as water softeners, and were the first to report its shortcomings and possible dangers.

Important Here

The NTA controversy is particularly important in Canada since the federal government last year regulated a major phosphate reduction in detergents as part of its campaign to clean up algae-glutted water bodies like the lower Great Lakes.

The U.S. National Cancer Institute has awarded a one-year, $148,700 contract to the Tufts University School of Medicine in Boston, Mass., to perform a two-part assessment of a Canadian-developed early detection test for cancer of the large intestine and rectum.

Principal investigators Drs. Robert Schwartz, James Patterson and Larry Nathanson will first determine whether the test developed by Dr. Phil Gold of McGill University, Montreal, is specific only to cancers of the gastro-intestinal tract.

Stormy Seas Ahead for Trudeau on His Tour of Maritimes

By CARL MOLLINS

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau is expected to encounter some politically-troubled waters on his nine-day voyage along the Atlantic coast starting tonight.

Fisheries disputes and depression of the pulp and paper industry are sure to raise waves in some of the 14 Canadian communities on his itinerary.

Tuesday he will leave Canada for about four hours to tour the two-island French territory of St. Pierre-Miquelon off the south coast of Newfoundland.

He also may run into pointed questions on such deep sources of regional discontent as the slow pace of job-making industrial development.

Latest employment statistics show 47,000 jobless in a labor force of 704,000 in the four Atlantic provinces. The region's seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate of 8.8 per cent in June is the highest in the country.

The first challenge is expected tonight in Yarmouth, the fishing port at the southwesern corner of Nova Scotia.

LOBSTERMEN UPSET

Area inshore lobster fishermen are reported upset about new federal licensing regulations due to be introduced.

Year-round lobstering will be permitted 50 miles from shore while the inshore men will continue to be restricted to taking lobster only from December to the end of May.

Chief beneficiaries of the new program will be the swordfish fleet, whose deep-water operations have been curtailed by mercury contamination of their normal catch.

The inshore fishermen fear that opening the lobster field to big boats will depress prices and diminish their supply.

Also causing concern is the bankruptcy closure this week of the Acadia Fisheries Ltd. plant at Canso, N.S., after months of worker-management dispute and inter-union rivalry.

Canso is not on the prime minister's itinerary, but is in the constituency of Privy Council President Allan MacEachen, the lone government MP from Nova Scotia who will accompany Mr. Trudeau in Nova Scotia, apart from the scheduled visit Saturday to Lunenburg.

TRAVEL BY SHIP

The tour will be made on the coast guard ship Sir William Alexander.

In Cape Breton, where the tour takes in folk festivals at Cheticamp and St. Ann's and a call at the restored fortress of Louisbourg, Mr. Trudeau will miss the declining coal-mining centres around Sydney, where the federal Cape Breton Development Corp. is trying to develop alternative employment.

At Louisbourg, however, he ventures into enemy territory.

It is in the constituency of Cape Breton-East Richmond, home base of waspish Donald MacInnis, a sharp-tongued Conservative critic of the prime minister who at one time provoked Mr. Trudeau to complain in the Commons that Mr. MacInnis was not a gentleman.

Nova Scotia is awaiting a federal cabinet decision on the future of the mechanically-troubled Glace Bay heavy water plant.

Premier Gerald Regan, who led the Liberals to power last October, has asked Ottawa to take over the $100 million enterprise from the province and rehabilitate it at an estimated cost of $30 million more.

In Newfoundland, Mr. Trudeau will encounter depression in the pulp and paper industry.

At Corner Brook, which he will visit Aug. 6, Bowaters Newfoundland Ltd. has just announced suspension until next year of its western Newfoundland woodland operations, affecting 300 workers. The company has shut down its mill four times this year for brief periods.

Premier Joseph Smallwood has proposed privately a federally-organized marketing board for pulp and paper to help lift the industry out of the current doldrums.

Mr. Smallwood, no doubt, will make the most of Mr. Trudeau's first visit to Newfoundland since 1968, especially since his Liberal government must seek to renew its mandate of 22 years before the end of September.

All four provinces on the tour —Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and a stop at Blanc Sabion in easternmost Quebec—have Liberal governments, although Conservatives hold 20 of the 22 federal seats in the three Atlantic provinces.

He is not visiting Conservative New Brunswick.

The two Liberal exceptions are Mr. MacEachen's federal riding of Cape Breton Highlands-Canso and the southern Newfoundland constituency of Burin-Burgeo held by Transport Minister Donald Jamieson.

In all, Mr. Trudeau's tour will take him through 14 federal constituencies—11 of them Conservative.

Blind Lookout

ROME (Reuter) — President Giuseppe Saragat has granted a full pardon to Atanasio Pedone, a blind Italian who a dozen years ago was given a 17-year-term for acting as a lookout when a crime was committed. A Palermo court had convicted Pedone of murder and armed robbery in the 1958 incident.

TV 'CAN CHANGE' CHILD'S BEHAVIOR

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Pre-school children who watch television are affected by the violence they see. And researchers insist that programs with constructive social themes can influence good, co-operative behavior.

A study by two Pennsylvania State University human development professors also acknowledges the useful role television can play in social development.

"There are behavioral effects associated with viewing violence," Drs. Aletha H. Stein and Lynette Friedrich said concerning reactions of 97 four-and-five-year-olds in nursery school play situations and at home. "Such viewing has an impact not only on aggressive behavior but also on self-control."

"On the other hand programs which stress themes of co-operation, persistence in the face of difficulty, tolerance of frustration and delay, and verbalization of feelings can be understood by very small children and may alter their behavior."

YOU ARE THERE FOR PARENTS TOO

NEW YORK (AP)—It won't be surprising if a lot of parents join their children in watching the revived television version of You Are There.

Kids probably will be hearing about how their parents were hooked on this CBS News recreation of historic events broadcast on radio from 1945-50 and on television from 1953-57.

The first television version was done live from New York and early stars included Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward, Lorne Greene and Rod Steiger.

Agreement to Rescue Lockheed With Loan Collapses

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tentative agreement that would have brought the stalled Lockheed aid bill to a prompt vote in the Senate collapsed Thursday. Nixon administration backers conceded they didn't have the votes to pass it.

Senator Alan Cranston (Rep. Calif.), a leader in the battle to save his home-state aerospace company from bankruptcy, said five Republicans indicated they would not vote for rescuing Lockheed although they would have supported broad legislation to provide federal loan guarantees to any big United States company in trouble.

Cranston said he didn't know what a Democratic head count showed, but the five Republican votes, probably would have made the difference between victory and defeat.

A tentative agreement that would have brought the issue of aid for only Lockheed to a vote Thursday night, was abandoned and Lockheed supporters prepared for a third attempt to shut off debate.

TODAY! 2 GREAT MOVIES !
"Perhaps the most beautiful movie in history."—Brendan Gill, The New Yorker. "Exquisite is only the first word that surges in my mind as an appropriate description of this exceptional film. Its color is absolutely gorgeous. The use of music and, equally eloquent, of silences and sounds is beyond verbal description. The performances are perfect—that is the only word."—Bosley Crowther, New York Times. "May well be the most beautiful film ever made."—Newsweek.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD: call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open daily, Monday through Saturday 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you call.

Before the Judge

21-year-old pregnant woman who is supporting a $140-a-day heroin habit was sentenced Thursday to six months in jail for 12 counts of uttering forged cheques and one of possession of heroin.

Judge William Ostler said he was giving a sentence that would ensure that Marion Andrew, 3184 Milgrove, would give birth to her child outside jail.

Defence counsel George Jones said earlier his client was the mother of one child and was 21½ months pregnant with a second.

He said he knew she would have to go to prison.

The pre-sentence report indicated the woman was supporting a heroin habit of between $140 and $160 a day.

Ostler said that the habit must be supported by "extensive criminal activity."

The accused earlier pleaded guilty to 10 uttering counts when she was charged jointly with another person. Court was told at the time that the accused cashed forged welfare cheques, that had been stolen, at various Esquimalt and Saanich grocery stores.

Thursday, she pleaded guilty to two uttering offences involving forged cheques.

The cheques totalled about $1,675.

The woman was observed on the evening of July 9 getting out of a car in the city. She had something in her mouth which was later revealed as a balloon with eight capsules of heroin.

George Mattila, 67, of 278 Pallisier, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a six-month probation when he pleaded guilty to stealing a pair of scissors from The Bay.

Mattila said he was on social welfare and was an old age pensioner. He asked Ostler if his name could be kept out of the papers.

"I have nothing to do with whether your name goes into the newspaper," the judge replied.

"But why should you be treated differently than anyone else?"

Ostler said part of the punishment is appearing in court on the charge but additional punishment is the publicity and shame connected with it.

He said he was imposing the suspended sentence with probation rather than a fine because of the man's financial circumstances.

James W. Buckner, 27, pleaded not guilty to a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a juvenile, and was remanded to Oct. 8.

Buckner, of 4953 Cordova Bay Road, elected to be tried by a judge without a jury on a previous charge of possession of narcotics for the purposes of trafficking. A preliminary hearing on that charge will be held Oct. 7.

James R. Doell, 24, address unavailable, was fined $200 in traffic court by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for failing to give a sample of his breath when requested to do so by a police officer.

He was also banned from driving for four months except when working.

A 23-year-old United States army deserter was sentenced to 14 days in jail Thursday by Judge William Ostler when he pleaded guilty to falsely stating his identity contrary to the Immigration Act.

David M. Cassel, originally of California, told Ostler that he intended appealing a deportation order because he feared being turned over to U.S. army authorities.

Court was told that Cassel had entered Canada about two years ago and lived under an assumed name until June of this year.

He returned to the U.S. last month and tried to re-enter Canada using borrowed identification of a Canadian citizen Tuesday.

Officials were suspicious and an inquiry was held Wednesday in which Cassel admitted his real identity. He was ordered deported.

Cassel said today he and another person were on their way to Alaska with $65 between them and thought the identification of the Canadian citizen would make it easier to enter the country.

Irish Blast Injures 11

BELFAST (Reuter) — Eleven persons were injured today when a bomb exploded in a restaurant in the city centre.

Police said there were about 30 persons in the restaurant when the bomb went off.

Security forces later said they believed the bomb was intended to damage the offices of The Daily Express, a British national newspaper, in the same building.

An army spokesman said there were recent threats to damage the Daily Express office because of articles in the paper said to be unfavorable to the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Hospitals Probed

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — Sumas municipal council decided Thursday to investigate accusations by alderman Victor Wiebe that U.S. citizens have been seeking hospital accommodation here because it is cheaper than in Washington state. Hospital administrator Stan Worthington said he knew of some Americans admitted to Abbotsford hospital. He said all persons requiring treatment are helped.

$16.7M Spent On Dam

B.C. Hydro spent $16.7 million in the year ended March 31 on the Jordan River redevelopment, the annual report of the crown corporation shows.

The hydro-electric development will provide 150,000 kilowatts of peaking capacity when it goes into service later this year.

The annual report of B.C. Hydro, released today, said plans are under way for a gas turbine unit at Port Hardy by 1973 and installation of additional capacity in the Victoria area by 1974 is being considered.

New transmission lines completed in the past year including a connection between Gold River and Quatsino. Clearing was started on a 35-mile right-of-way to serve Tahsis and the right-of-way was acquired for the 138,000-volt line to take Jordan River power to load centres in Victoria. This line will be built this year, the report said.

Herb Plant Leaves Full of Flavor

By HILDA BEASTALL

This year two crops of leaves for drying can be taken from most of the herbs. Plants cut back for the first batch in early June have made a lot of new shoots ready to take now.

Looking at your shrubby perennial herbs like thyme, sage, rosemary and lemon verbena. The quickly grown young shoots will be full of flavor in the warm weather and well worth drying for use in winter recipes.

Hilda

Several methods tre used to dry herb leaves, but high temperatures will reduce the flavor, spoil the color and in short, give you just a little pile of worthless dust.

If you have a warm room with a constant circulation of dry, clean air, hang small bunches of stems complete with the leaves so that moving air passes through them.

Should you suspect a lot of dust in the air such as when you live beside a highway or a gravel road, put the stems in clean brown paper bags to hang. The heat can be greater but don't pack these stems in tightly.

Three days at 80 deg. F. will usually dry the thinner leaves; sage takes longer because the leaves are thicker.

If you have more than one kind of mint, keep the leaves separate in drying and storing, for the flavors vary a great deal. Lemon balm is useful in winter, so dry some of it too.

Parsley needs spreading thinly on cookie sheets to put into a 200 deg. F. oven with the door open. Move the pieces frequently and be sure they are not piled up.

All herbs need to be dried until they are crisp and brittle. When this stage is reached the leaves are stripped from those on stiff woody stems like thyme, sage and rosemary before storing in glass jars with screw tops.

Do not crumble the pieces to a dust at this time. Your herbs will retain more flavor and aroma in larger pieces. Crumble finer when adding to your recipe.

Another point, choose a cool cupboard with the jars in darkness. Herbs may look pretty in a row in a spice rack, but quality suffers. Light quickly reduces the value of your product.

Annual herbs such as sweet marjoram, summer savory, sweet basil can also be cut for drying now, and still grow plenty for later.

The less common herbs are the ones which mark you as a homemaker interested enough to experiment with the unusual in salads, soups and casseroles.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, one of our defenders committed an error, with the result that South fulfilled a game contract that should have been defeated. Can you isolate the defensive mistake and bring it to light?

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
3♠	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♣.

Even in retrospect, it is difficult to fault South for his three notrump response, although the making of 11 tricks at spades would have been as easy as pie. North's only losers at his major suit contract would have been two trump tricks.

East put up the club jack on West's opening lead, and South captured the trick with his king. The eight of spades was then led, and when West followed with the three, dummy's five was played. It was South's hope, of course, that West possessed the queen of spades. But, on this given day, East had the queen, and captured the trick.

He then returned the club nine, which was permitted to win the trick. East next played his remaining club, South taking it with his ace.

It now became a routine matter for declarer to lead his remaining spade, driving out East's ace, and establishing four spade winners in dummy. As was stated, a defensive error was made. What was the error?

From East's pointof view, it was perfectly obvious that declarer was going to attempt to establish the board's spade suit. It was equally obvious to East that he had two sure spade winners. It should also have been apparent to East that dummy had just one outside entry, the heart queen.

As East should have viewed the set-up, his two spade winners would never run away. Hence, he should have allowed South's eight of spades to have won the initial spade lead. He should have done this in an attempt to break the North-South line of communication in spades.

With the eight-spot winning, South would then have led another spade, putting up dummy's nine. East's queen would have captured this trick — and South would have been a "dead duck."

Whatever East returned, South would capture. He would now enter dummy via the queen of hearts, to lead the king of spades to East's ace. The board's spade suit would now be established — but uncashable, since South couldn't reach dummy again.

Andy flopped down into a chair. "I got the drinks, just sixty bottles in all," he said. "They're in the car."

"Sounds a lot but we invited a crowd," Susan commented. "Did it cost much?"

"Exactly sixty bucks," replied Andy. "Scotch at $6.50 a bottle, wine at $2.75, and that cider at fifty cents a bottle. All good stuff and nothing else."

How many of each did he buy?

Thanks for idea to Mrs. W. Martin, Toronto, Ontario.

SOLUTION MONDAY

$58,000 Facelift

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pacific National Exhibition directors voted Wednesday to spend another $58,000 on the Forum, bringing to $656,000 the amount being used on renovations. The project was started this spring and is expected to be completed in October. The newly-renovated structure will be a home for minor hockey, figure skating and other sports, and will also accommodate trade shows and exhibits.

TENANTS LOSE ANOTHER ROUND

Provincial Judge Berald Levey granted a request by Wall and Redekop Realty for eviction orders against 16 tenants of an apartment on East 14th Avenue.

He also ordered the tenants to pay rent for June, July and August which they have withheld in protest against what they allege is an unfair rent increase.

The tenants were given until Aug. 31 to find somewhere else to live.

Judge Levey said the tenant has no right of "self-help" under the Landlord and Tenant Act.

"The legislation did away with the landlord's right of self-help and for tenant to assume that right is just as iniquitous as the old legislation," he said.

"It ill behooves the tenant to take the law into his own hands."

He said the proper way to protest a rent increase would be to pay the old rent and take the dispute to court.

Chains Cautious On Unit Pricing

TORONTO (CP) — Spokesmen for supermarket chains reacted cuatiously Thursday to Consumer Affairs Minister Basford's request that they initiate unit pricing in their stores.

Unit pricing indicates the cost of a product broken down per ounce or per pound to help the shopper determine the better buy for items available in more than one package size.

A and P president Fred Kennedy said his company would soon begin experimenting with unit pricing on a wide range of products to determine the cost of such a program.

But he doesn't see much need for it.

"I don't want to slight something that everybody wants but I don't want to saddle consumers with extra costs," he said.

He said it would cost many thousands of dollars in overtime to re-label all the store shelves, but probably wouldn't cost much to keep the program going once it was established.

A and P policy is to pass on savings to customers on large-size packages, he added.

ALREADY USE IT

Two Ontario food-store chains voluntarily introduced the unit-pricing system earlier this year.

Food City inaugurated the practice in its 31 Ontario markets in April and IGA introduced the system in 140 of its central Ontario stores in May.

A spokesman for Dominion Stores Ltd. said Dominion is currently experimenting with unit pricing in a few stores.

He said that in the state of Massachusetts, where the Toronto-based company also operates, a law requires unit pricing and specifies the size of type used on the pricing tickets.

NOT BEING TRIED

An executive of Loblaw Groceterias Ltd. said unit pricing is not being tried except for meat and produce items, which have been unit priced for some time.

"I think the government is more interested in detergents and breakfast foods rather than the facial tissues mentioned by the minister, whch I found rather interesting," he said.

He said he would prefer not to discuss future policy for competitive reasons.

Basford's letter asking co-operation in instituting unit pricing went out last Friday to nine major supermarket chains.

Third Bid Launched For Takeover

VANCOUVER (CP) — The breakaway United Metal and Mine Workers of Canada Thursday launched a third take-over bid on the United Steelworkers of America in B.C.

Roger Richard, UMMWC president, said the union has applied to the British Columbia labor relations board for certification at Western Mines on Vancouver Island.

He said that 106 of the 160 mine workers signed up following a debate between representatives of both unions before the membership last week.

However, steelworkers' representative Neil McLeod said "a large number" of the miners have revoked their membership in the independent Canadian union.

The UMMWC applied earlier for certification for about 200 men at Dison Development's Jordan River mine and for about 70 men at A. J. Forsyth and Co. in Vancouver.

N-TEST BACKED AS QUAKE HITS

Times News Services

A moderate earthquake was recorded this morning in the vicinity of Amchitka Island in the Aleutians, it was reported by the Palmer Observatory in Alaska.

The blast is to test the warhead of the Safeguard Spartan anti-missile system.

An observatory spokesman said the quake registered 5.3 on the Richter scale and was centred at Shemya Island, about 250 miles from Amchitak.

There were no reports of damage or injury.

Opponents of the Amchitka test claim the explosion of the large nuclear device could trigger a major earthquake causing devastation on the west coast of Canada and the United States and the islands of Hawaii.

Doctors Debate Counter Action

By DON VIPOND

Doctors who represent their colleagues throughout British Columbia will decide in a week how hard they will attack the provincial government in a dispute over hospital privileges.

The meeting was called by the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons, the doctors' licencing body, to sample the mood of physicians on new powers granted Health Minister Ralph Loffmark this week.

An order-in-council made public Tuesday gives Loffmark the authority to grant, restrict or deny a doctor hospital privileges. This power had previously belonged to the board of each hospital which usually accepted the recommendation of a doctors' credentials committee.

NO WAY

Without hospital privileges, a doctor has no way to handle patients who require hospitalization other than referring them to another doctor who has privileges.

Dr. W. G. McClure, registrar of the college, said from Vancouver today that out of Thursday night's meeting has come a decision to call an emergency meeting of the council of the college, 11 members elected from districts. It will be held in Vancouver Aug. 7.

The council in turn may decide to call an emergency meeting of British Columbia's 3,300 doctors. Or it might decide to let the issue rest until the college's annual meeting in October, said McClure.

CATCH MOOD

At the Thursday night meeting, which he said was to catch the mood of doctors by tapping a cross-section, opinions on what action to take ranged from ultra-conservative to radical — "from we should do nothing to we should withdraw our services."

The B.C. division of the Canadian Medical Association announced earlier that it will hold an emergency meeting in Vancouver Aug. 6. The Victoria Medical Society, representing close to 300 local doctors, will meet Tuesday to instruct its delegates attending that meeting.

Loffmark has claimed he will use his new powers to effect a better distribution of new doctors throughout the province, countering their concentration in Vancouver, Victoria and the Okanagan.

McClure denied today there

Nixon Welcome But . . .

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said today Chinese leaders told him that unless President Nixon is prepared to make significant concessions there could hardly be any beneficial results from his trip to Peking.

Stanfield was talking to reporters on his arrival here after a six-day visit to China, during which he met acting Foreign Minister Chi Peng-fei and Kuo Mo-jo, vice-chairman otthe National People's Congress, China's parliament.

The Progressive Conservative party leader said both officials outlined at considerable length and force China's position on relations with the United States.

"It was emphasized to me that President Nixon would be welcome to visit Peking, but unless he is prepared to make significant concessions, there would hardly be any beneficial results from the visit," he said.

Stanfield said the Chinese placed great emphasis on the question of Taiwan, home of 14 million Nationalist Chinese, which Peking has pledged to "liberate."

By United Press International

Assistant U.S. secretary of state, Joseph J. Sisco, brought word from Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to Israeli Premier Golda Meir today that Sadat wants to continue efforts to reach an interim Middle East peace agreement.

Six Arab leaders met in Tripoli, Libya, to consider ways of forcing King Hussein to temper his tough attitude toward Palestinian guerrillas in Jordan.

Political sources in Cairo said the most likely outcome of the summit meeting would be political or economic sanctions against Jordan or acceptance or guarantees from Jordan that guerrillas would be allowed freedom of action.

Sisco, pursuing American peace-making efforts in the Middle East, met Foregin Minister Abba Eban in Jerusalem for 40 minutes and then spent three hours talking with Mrs. Meir.

Vancouver Police 'Unable' To Control Drug Abuse

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chief Constable John Fisk said Thursday the police force can do little to fight Vancouver's increasing drug addiction problem.

He told the city police commission the force can only help control the situation and act as a limited deterrent.

"We must look to our sociologists and medical people and others in related fields to take the kind of action necessary to combat the causes and effects of this major social problem," Chief Fisk said.

In a statement to the commission, he said he felt it timely to comment on the drug problem in Vancouver in view of recent developments.

He said Vancouver's history of hard drug abuse dates back to the turn of the century, with the smoking of opium by a few Chinese immigrants.

ACTIVITIES KNOWN

He said their activities were known, that the practice was apparently not considered to be a threat to the health of the community at that time.

"However," Chief Fisk added, "it would appear that within a few years there was an increased demand for more refined drugs.

"By 1950, the number of heroin addicts in Vancouver was estimated at 500 and at this time it is estimated that there are some 4,000 hard drug addicts in Vancouver."

Chief Fisk said trends for the first half of 1971 indicate there will probably be about 600 persons arrested for possession of heroin by the end of the year, compared with 383 last year.

ORGANIZED

"The distribution of hard drugs in Vancouver is controlled by several highly-organized groups with connections for the most part in eastern Canada," the police chief said.

"Some four or five years ago the introduction of soft drugs to the local scene added considerably to our total drug problem.

"The number of persons arrested and charged with possession and trafficking in soft drugs has accelerated rapidly over the past few years and is an indication of the growth of the problem."

If present trends continue, the chief said, close to 1,200 persons will have been arrested by the end of the year for possession of soft drugs compared to only 198 four years ago.

PROFITS LIMITED

"Although there is obviously some organization in respect of securing and distributing soft drugs, the hard drug criminal group have to our knowledge not involved themselves in this field and this no doubt for a number of reasons, including the fact that the profits are relatively limited."

He said continued enforcement has resulted in a considerable number of arrests, but repeated that enforcement alone could not solve the problem.

ANTI-DRUG PATROLS SOUGHT FOR PARKS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city parks board decided Thursday to ask city council and the police commission to add at least 10 specially trained officers to the police youth detail in an attempt to curb use of drugs by juveniles in city parks.

The board also passed resolutions calling for an investigation into the possibility of park curfews, legislation against the inhalation of noxious vapors such as airplane glue, and more forceful attempts to charge the parents of young habitual drug users with criminal negligence.

PRIVATE DRUG USER 'PAYING A PREMIUM'

TORONTO (CP) — Consumers who pay privately for prescription drugs shouldn't have to pay more than those who receive drugs from hospital and government sources, says the Commission on Pharmaceutical Services.

"We think the prices to consumers who buy privately should be lower in many cases," a spokesman for the commission said today.

He cited the tranquillizer valium, which hospitals and governments get free, but which costs the consumer $8.44 per 100 capsules if he buys it in a drug store.

In a 500-page report released Thursday, the commission says the consumer who pays privately is in effect subsidizing the one who receives drugs from hospital and government sources.

The value of a prescription drugs dispensed has risen from $30 million a year in 1940 to $300 million in 1970.

The recommendation is one of 97 included in the report by the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association which sponsored the three-year-study at a cost of $160,000.

The eight-member commission was headed by John B. Macdonald, executive director of the Council of Ontario Universities and formerly president of the University of British Columbia.

The report stated there had been a decline of more than 200 in the number of pharmacies in Canada between 1962 and 1969, with Ontario showing the greatest drop.

If the trend continues, the report said, more communities will be left without the services of a pharmacy "which could impede the availability of drugs to the public."

The report also said that advertising of prescription services and prices reduces the dispensing of prescription drugs to a merchandising basis and "tends to eventually lower the standards of the service both quantitatively and qualitatively."

The commission recommended:

- Compulsory continuing education for pharmacists as a condition for retaining a licence.
- Stringent regulations governing Pharmacy licences throughout Canada to ensure that policies and practices reflect the public interest.
- Exclusion of ownership of a pharmacy by a physician or the licensing of a physician as a pharmaceutical chemist.
- Phsical separation within a drug store of the area in which drugs are dispensed.
- Continuing study of manpower requirements because of rising demands, an aging population of retail pharmacists and the entry of more women into the field.

HOTTEST DAY OF THE YEAR

Victoria was hot Thursday — hotter than any other day of the year so far and the hottest July day since 1965.

Westerly winds in the Strait of Juan de Fuca are expected to cool temeratures for the next two days — but not much. The temperature is still expected to nudge the 80-degree mark. Early morning fog patches can be expected along the Victoria coastline.

Thursday was a hot day in Nanaimo with the temperature hitting 95. In Comox it was 89 degrees, Port Hardy 78 and Kamloops experienced 99 degrees.

Apollo Pair Heading For Moon Adventure

HOUSTON (AP) — After one abortive separation attempt, two Apollo 15 astronauts successfully cast off their lunar module Falcon from the command ship today and headed for man's riskiest moon landing in a boulder-strewn basin ringed by 15,000-foot mountains and a gaping canyon.

"You're on your own," Alfred M. Worden told Scott and James B. Irwin as they drifted away.

Until the second attempt was successful there was high drama and tension for more than 20 minutes as the two spaceships circled the moon.

But when they came around the edge of the moon the ships were still locked firmly nose-to-nose.

"Houston, this is Falcon. We did not get a separation," Commander Scott announced.

NO ELECTRICITY

Mission Control immediately calculated that the docking probe had not received the electrical power needed to unlatch.

Worden removed a hatch and climbed into the connecting tunnel between the two craft. He reported the electrical umbilical cord was loose. He tightened it and power flowed to the probe.

After the two ships manoeuvred to the proper attitude, Mission Control gave

UN SEAT FOR PEKING

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp Friday voiced doubt, in a discussion with Chinese ambassador Huang Hua, that the United States can block Peking's admission to the United Nations this fall.

He told the newly-arrived envoy that from their calculations Canadian authorities are "not sure" the U.S. could obtain a majority for the so-called important question resolution used in the past to help keep the Communist regime out.

HYDRO NOT OPTIMISTIC

B.C. Hydro and Power Authority says the level of income reached with a $16 million profit last year can't be maintained in the future because of steadily rising costs.

In its annual report released today, the provincial crown corporation revealed that increased sales of electricity to residential customers and increased electricity rates resulted in an $18 million increase in revenue from that source.

The report doesn't specify how much money Hydro can expect to make in the years ahead, except that it will be less than last year.

Premier Bennett said earlier this week that he doesn't see any further Hydro electricity rate increases as long as the utility can operate at a profit. Hydro lost $400,000 two years ago, prior to increasing its rates.

Bennett revealed Hydro's profit earlier this week.

Worst Aviation Disaster

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese jetliner with 162 persons aboard and a Japanese jet fighter collided over Northern Japan today and crashed in what appeared to be the worst disaster in aviation history.

The pilot of the F-86F Sabre fighter parachuted to safety, but the national police said there was little or no hope of any survivors from the Boeing 727 airliner.

The airline, All Nippon Airways, said only one foreigner was aboard the big jet, the American flight engineer, Donn M. Carpenter of Detroit. He had been flying for the line since February, 1970.

By nightfall, police said, 42 bodies had been recovered in a mountainous area about 200 miles northeast of Tokyo.

A piece of the tail section of the plane was found, and the bodies recovered were badly mangled. Shortly after darkness fell, police said other parts of the airliner, including a piece of the fuselage, had been found.

Search and rescue workers planned to push through the rough terrain throughout the night in the virtually hopeless search for survivors. There were 2,000 self-defence troops, 621 national police and 24 helicopters assigned to the task.

Premier Eisaku Sato cut short a brief vacation to meet with officials investigating the disaster.

HALTS TRAINING

The air self-defence force said it had ordered a temporary halt in training flights while the investigations are going on. Keikichi Masuhaka, director-general of the self-defence agency, expressed apologies for the collision and condolences to the families of the victims.

The airliner was on an alternate flight to Tokyo from Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island. It had 155 passengers—including a 10-month-old baby—and a crew of seven aboard, the airline said.

Most of the passengers were returning from a tour

French Crash Claims 37

PAU, France (AP) — A French air force transport plane caught fire and crashed in flames today killing 37 persons aboard, including 30 paratroop officers, air force headquarters reported.

The plane, a twin-engine Nord 2501, went down just as the troops were about to begin a jump exercise, the communique said.

"According to the first reports, fire broke out on board and the aircraft, after requesting priority to land, crashed trying to reach the airfield."

Listed as dead are 30 officers, four jump masters and three members of the flight crew.

CONVICTS ALLOWED WEEKEND VISITS

OTTAWA (CP) — More liberal rules designed to increase the contact between prisoners in federal penitentiaries and outside society were announced today by Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer.

Under the directive, visits between prisoners and their families on evenings, weekends and statutory holidays are to be encouraged. Opportunity will be provided for families to participate more frequenty in such activities as church services, graduation ceremonies and sports events.

DIARY NOTES

O, Magic Moment —A Tiger Crows

★ ★ ★

Dear Diary: If it ever got out, of course I'd surely be accused of disloyalty, but I've been wondering if we shouldn't hurry to the nearest kindergarten and start recruiting editorial staff.

There's this children's program called Mister Rogers' Neighborhood on the Public Broadcasting Service (Channel Nine) and when they had Astronaut Al Worden on it, just before he and his buddies shot into the wild blue yonder, I chanced to be viewing it in my tame, grey living room.

The questions all came from boys and girls of no more than six or seven years of age. I must have seen and read dozens of incomprehensible, jargon-ridden interviews with astronauts. Now, for the first time, one of them was being asked the things I've always wanted to know. How do you 'go potty' up there? Do you have to go to the moon? Are you ever scared? Do astronauts ever cry?

Major Worden suddenly became a warm and vulnerable human being. The voyage of Apollo 15 became a trip to which any man or child might relate. A breakthrough in journalism, no less.

Dear Diary: My relationship with Tiger, which has been absorbing me so these past weeks, reached a critical plateau this morning. My wife accused me, only half in jest, of having elevated him to the role of alter ego! How ridiculous! How simply preposterous!

True, I seem to spend a surprising amount of time out there by the chicken run. Still, that was true even before Tiger's arrival. The very day we brought home the six hens from Derek Pethick's place I knew that they were going to be soothing additions to my life. No more than four months old, Derek said, but what fine big sassy hens they were, even then, a rust-orange cross-breed, a blend, you might say, designed to be hardy and to lay vast numbers of splendid brown eggs.

It would be September, Derek said, before we could expect that particular miracle, but I didn't care. How restful it was, after a hard day at the office, leaning on the gate, nibbling a piece of straw, just watching them, gossiping among themselves, sometimes being quite mean to each other, doing their daft little Latin-American rhumba of scratching, running to me, wide-legged, on their sinister ungainly yellow talons, when I cast some grain. As tranquillizers alone they were worth the investment.

Tiger came into this serene, all-girl world by chance. Dave, our neighbor, said he had this little white rooster, just born. Would we like him when he was ready to leave his mother? Mother, as it happened, soon decided that, rejecting him quite callously. "Out!" she cried. A minute later Dave gently lifted Tiger from his chicken run into ours.

The ensuring real-life drama lasted no more than three minutes at the most. Tiger stood at the fence looking back to his heartless mother, a lonely, wistful, crestfallen outcast. The six big goofy hens pressed about, consumed with curiosity, bunting and crowding, each twice his size. Tiger gave one last, longing, pleading glance to his mother. Turning, with a long, shuddering sigh, he exploded. Whap! Zap! Zowie! The hens went flying, rust-orange feathers every which way. Then Tiger leaped to the top of the compost heap, threw back his little head, and crowed. A falsetto, a hesitant crow, to be sure, but altogether magnificent.

Since then things have settled down into a fixed pattern, a society, really. Tiger is in charge. The six fat gossiping hens are mean to each other and do their daft little rhumba, but always with a wary, respectful, anticipating eye on The Master, who often takes a run at them just for hellery. At night he occupies the roost above their roost, gazing down upon them with regal, malevolent eyes. Any day now—and don't think I won't be there — he will finalize the arrangement.

My father-in-law and I stand out there quite a lot, I concede. Sometimes when Tiger sends them all scurrying we grin at each other, sometimes even nudge each other in the ribs. But alter ego? How ridiculous! How simply preposterous!

Dear Diary: On hand today the second issue of the revived Liberty magazine, containing original articles clear back to 1932, and, like the resurrection of the Saturday Evening Post, a reminder of the mighty, untapped power of nostalgia.

The magazine's editors suggest, indeed, that it could be the overriding emotion of the 70s: "Let's face it, Nostalgia is a form of running away from today and, so far, today hasn't been a very bad day to run away from." A valid point, perhaps, except that every generation — perhaps even this one — always looks back on the past 20 or 30 years ago, however grim, as "The Good Old Days."

Supposing, each day, that the Times of exactly 30 years ago was distributed to our subscribers and the press run of today's paper was stored away for distribution 30 years hence. The very, worst news could be digested without anxiety, sure in the knowledge that it was all passed, that we all survived in spite of every crisis. Instant Nostalgia! Swell! Keen! The Cat's Pyjamas!

Addiction Afflicts India, Too

The growth of drug addiction and alcoholism among young people is not confined to the western world, according to His Holiness Sant Amar Singh of Baroondi, Punjab, India.

Sant, visiting Victoria with five Sikh holy men, says India is faced with similar problems. He attributes this to the lack of divine knowledge.

"Man's mind tends towards the negative aspects of life which invariably leads to suffering and sorrow," he said. "It is only through divine knowledge that man can attain happiness and peace."

The party is on a world tour to bring the message of Guru (teacher) Nanak, founder of the Sikh religion, who emphasized compassion and service to mankind.

The group met Premier Bennett after holding in Vancouver a baptism of Sikhism, the first ceremony of its kind held in British Columbia.

The six holy men strongly opposed use of tobacco and the drinking of wine.

"We recognized the harmful effects of tobacco 300 years ago," Sant said.

Durgadev Singh Nindra, secretary of the party, said pollution, the destruction of wildlife and the use of chemicals to stimulate the growth of vegetables, should concern everyone.

"We leave wildlife alone," he said. "Animals have as much right to live as man."

He added vegetables produced artificially never fully mature and do not contain the same food values.

"Man needs to get closer to nature," he said. "He can achieve this through prayer, meditation and self-discipline."

The party leaves Friday for Paldi, near Duncan, where they will attend a service at the Sikh Temple.

On Saturday and Sunday they will be at Lake Cowichan and on Monday at Port Alberni. They will return to Vancouver before proceeding to Toronto and Montreal.

CITY'S FIRST NAME?

Lost Letter May Settle Old Issue

By PETER McNELLY

A missing letter from Queen Victoria to Charles Ross — the man who built Fort Victoria — could become the property of the provincial archives and settle a long-standing controversy over the fort's first name.

The letter, along with nine others, has been willed to the archives by Maud Wren, Ross' great-granddaughter. Miss Wren died Feb. 9, 1970, in Roy, Washington, a small town about 18 miles south of Tacoma. She was 84.

The estate's executor, Tacoma lawyer Alan Hutchison, told the Times today he was instructed in the will to recover the letters and give them to the archives.

The nine other letters are at the offices of the Washington State Historical Society and have been there since 1910.

Hutchison said Miss Wren loaned the letters and spent much of her later years trying unsuccessfully to get them returned to her.

She said he has a copy of a letter from Edwin E. Murray, Miss Wren's first cousin, stating the letters belong to Miss Wren.

Was It Camosun or Fort Albert?

Hutchison said the letter from Queen Victoria was addressed to Charles Ross and told him to build "Fort Albert" at the location of what is now the City of Victoria.

Historian Derek Pethick who wrote Victoria, The Fort, says the issue of whether Victoria ever had other names has not been fully proved.

One chronicle (Canada and Its Provinces) states the fort originally was called Camosun, an Indian name meaning "place for gathering camass," a lily.

In 1845, says Pethick, the name was changed to Fort Albert and then to Fort Victoria in 1846. However, these dates are not necessarily correct.

Hutchison said most of the other letters deal with mundane subjects such as invoices and accounts. He said Miss Wren had loaned the Queen's letter to an old friend Edith Sokolik who is still living.

Miss Wren's will stated the letter was kept in a tin box in her friend's house. Hutchison said he inspected the box but did not find the letter.

But he said he has reason to suspect Mrs. Sokolik still has it somewhere.

Charles Ross was an employee of the Hudson's Bay Company who was commissioned to come to Victoria in 1843. He supervised construction with his assistant Roderick Finlayson.

Ross' health had been bad for many years, and he died June 27, 1844. Hutchison said Ross apparently gave the letters to one of his daughters, who later became Miss Wren's aunt.

She Was a Cantankerous Woman

Hutchison said the Ross and Wren families are deeply involved with the history of the Pacific Northwest, their members having lived in Utah, Oregon, Washington and B.C.

He also shed some light on the geneology of Ross' wife, Isabella, who he said was born on an island on the St. Lawrence River of part Indian origin.

Miss Wren, he said, was a cantankerous woman who became famous in the Tacoma area for her and her brother's battles with the state highway department.

The will also left other historical items to the archives here. These include: daguerreotypes, a large two-gallon crock which belonged to John Ross, Charles' brother, a dress borrowed from England which was to have been worn at an 1845 function honoring Sir James Douglas and other old English dresses.

Her will states all these items should be left to Victoria "not only because of the difficulty I have had with the state of Washington, but also because the Ross family is connected intimately with the city of Victoria in British Columbia and because Charles Ross was instrumental in founding said city."

Hutchison said part of the controversy in the will rests in the fact that another Ross family member, E. K. Murray, is on the board of directors of the Washington State Historical Society.

Hutchison said Murray maintains the society should retain possession of the letters.

Rogue MLA to Make Decisive Trek to Interior

By BRUCE YEMEN

The political future of Dr. Scott Wallace, Social Credit MLA for Oak Bay, may be decided in the next few weeks.

Wallace said Thursday he will weigh his future while on a holiday beginning next week. Oddly enough, he said, he will be going to Kelowna — Bennett country.

The MLA's frustration at the role of a backbencher in the government party has been freely expressed since his election in August, 1969.

But the events in the past few weeks have virtually "forced" him to consider other possibilities than simply leaving politics, he said Thursday.

His earlier feeling that he would simply retire from politics was based on a lack of action by the government on his proposals for wider health services including government aid for intermediate care.

"Now I am deeply distressed by positive action taken by the government in the wrong fields," Wallace said, referring to a cabinet order giving Health Minister Ralph Loffmark power to deny doctors hospital privileges and another requiring medical laboratories to be licensed.

"I am almost being compelled into considering other political ambitions," said Wallace, adding he is now concerned with the need to fight the cabinet's "tendency toward dictatorship" as shown in recent actions.

●

The MLA said that "from a conscience point of view" it would bother him to think that people regarded a decision to leave politics as simply the action of a man who didn't get his way.

He indicated his current feelings about the Social Credit government would be improved considerably if the cabinet rescinds the controversial order giving Loffmark power over doctors' hospital privileges.

The regulation is not only dangerous from the power it gives the minister but it is likely to create many more medical problems than it would ever solve, Wallace said. A shortage of doctors in B.C. could be the eventual result.

Wallace said the grassroot reaction has been sympathetic to his viewpoint and critical of the government.

"The man in the street just doesn't go for this sort of thing," Wallace said.

In the past, Wallace has dismissed any suggestions that he could serve a useful purpose sitting in the legislature as an independent MLA or as a member of another party. His aim, he said, was to help improve government policy from within.

But it is no secret that the B.C. Conservative party would like to have a representative in the legislature.

Some political observers feel the Oak Bay constituency would be ideal for a popular candidate of an independent frame of political mind. The riding remained Liberal for years despite efforts by Premier Bennett to get a member elected there.

●

The Socreds didn't succeed until Wallace came along.

Asked about Wallace's announced reconsideration of his position in the party, Bennett said this week:

"He made the decision to come in and he can make the decision to go out, I guess. I hope he stays."

AN ENTRENCHED MEDICAL profession has fallen foul of an authoritarian provincial government and, as usual when the mighty disagree, the poor damned subservient taxpayer with his aches and pains can expect to be the loser.

As usual, both participants in the dispute profess to have his best interests at heart.

Weighing challenge and reply, the only suggestion I can offer to any bewildered citizen is this:

Live right . . . guard your health . . . and if overtaken, hope for an ailment that will yield to a dosage of aspirin from the bathroom medicine cabinet.

I respect and admire the working doctor. But en masse, in his associations, he is a chump. Otherwise, he would long ago have beaten the Bennett government to the punch — and perhaps retained control of his professional future — by making certain moves.

He would have clamored long, loud and continually for a training system and facilities that would have ensured an adequate supply of B.C.-trained medical school graduates.

He would also have pressed hard for subsidization by government and his profession of medical training, in return for which the trainee would contract to serve for a specified time in any provincial area to which he might be assigned.

Having been caught flat-footed by this Social Credit coup, I trust the profession won't let an understandable sense of outrage lead it into stupidities that would reduce the less than ample supply of goodwill that doctors command.

To opt out of medicare, for instance, would be to present Canada's shrewdest and most effective politician with carte blanche for further restrictive measures. The most obvious of these strikes me as a downward revision of doctors' fees — a move that would be widely greeted with chuckles and smiles.

To avoid any possible misunderstanding, that shrewdest politician is not Loffmark but Premier William Andrew Cecil Bennett, the master puppeteer who controls the strings of Socred government in British Columbia.

And much as I dislike to be pessimistic, I retain an almost superstitious conviction that Mr. B. will be tweaking those strings for at least another term after this present one.

There's little point, either, in expecting that charges of dictatorial procedure will induce this government to reverse its course. A club has been placed in the health minister's hands, and there I expect it will remain.

There is, however, a ray of light. The medical profession in B.C. may have lost a round, but not necessarily the battle. Castle Bennett isn't completely impregnable. Should Loffmark be permitted to undertake more than token use of this new weapon, the rebound could do considerable damage to the father-image which is his party chief's prime vote-catcher.

Disallow a doctor the use of a hospital in the community where his shingle hangs, and a question that could prove politically embarrassing at once arises.

If it is true that outer British Columbia is short of doctors, let the association do what it can to change the picture.

And, as ethical men, don't make the mistake of looking for ethics in government. All you'll find there is political expediency.

Hydro Bus Loads Drop

The number of passengers carried on B.C. Hydro buses in Victoria and Vancouver dropped 16.2 per cent in the year ended March 31.

The annual report of the crown corporation, released today, showed 65.9 million passengers carried compared with 78.7 million in the previous year. The latest year was the lowest in the last 10 years.

"The decrease in passengers carried reflects normal resistance to a fare increase, the impact of generally unsettled economic conditions and the suspension of urban transit services caused by a strike of members of the Amalgamated Transit Union," the report said.

"The combination of the strike, which occurred from Jan. 4 to Feb. 5, and extremely adverse weather conditions forced transit patrons to form car pools or travel by private automobiles.

"These alternative transportation arrangements are continuing to have an unfavorable effect on usage of B.C. Hydro transit services."

Gross revenue from urban transportation, excluding the province's $2 million subsidy, amounted to $15.3 million compared with $15.2 million in the year before.

Fares were increased to 25 cents from 20 cents April 1, 1970.

The report said the new contract agreement with the Amalgamated Transit Union will "add further" to heavy operating losses.

The amount of operating losses was not stated in the report.

Government, which seems determined to establish political control over the profession, demonstrates its asserted concern by an order-in-council power play. The individual medico may be granted or denied hospital privileges by Social Credit Health Minister Loffmark. (Where this could leave the patients of a disallowed doctor is a matter for interesting, if grim, speculation.)

A big gun from the medical side has boomed a response. The gist of it is that the new regulation might force British Columbia doctors to opt out of medicare billing, their patients direct and leaving them to wangle their costs from government's Medical Insurance Commission.

WORST IN AVIATION HISTORY

Japan Air Crash Kills 162

Collided With Jet Fighter

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese jetliner with 162 persons aboard and a Japanese jet fighter collided over Northern Japan today and crashed in what appeared to be the worst disaster in aviation history.

The pilot of the F-86F Sabre fighter parachuted to safety, but the national police said there was little or no hope of any survivors from the Boeing 727 airliner.

The airline, All Nippon Airways, said only one foreigner was aboard the big jet, the American flight engineer, Donn M. Carpenter of Detroit. He had been flying for the line since February, 1970.

By nightfall, police said, 42 bodies had been recovered in a mountainous area about 300 miles northeast of Tokyo.

A piece of the tail section of the plane was found, and the bodies recovered were badly mangled. Shortly after darkness fell, police said other parts of the airliner, including a piece of the fuselage, had been found.

Search and rescue workers planned to push through the rough terrain throughout the night in the virtually hopeless search for survivors. There were 2,000 self-defence troops, 621 national police and 24 helicopters assigned to the task.

Premier Eisaku Sato cut short a brief vacation to meet with officials investigating the disaster.

HALTS TRAINING

The air self-defence force said it had ordered a temporary halt in training flights while the investigations are going on. Keikichi Masuhaka, director-general of the self-defence agency, expressed apologies for the collision and condolences to the families of the victims.

The airliner was on an afternoon flight to Tokyo from Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island. It had 155 passengers—including a 10-month-old baby—and a crew of seven aboard, the airline said.

Most of the passengers were returning from a tour

HOTTEST DAY OF THE YEAR

Victoria was hot Thursday — hotter than any other day of the year so far and the hottest July day since 1965.

Westerly winds in the Strait of Juan de Fuca are expected to cool temperatures for the next two days — but not much. The temperature is still expected to nudge the 80-degree mark. Early morning fog patches can be expected along the Victoria coastline.

Thursday was a hot day in Nanaimo with the temperature hitting 95. In Comox it was 89 degrees, Port Hardy 78 and Kamloops experienced 99 degrees.

Doctors Debate Counter Action

By DON VIPOND

Doctors who represent their colleagues throughout British Columbia will decide in a week how hard they will attack the provincial government in a dispute over hospital privileges.

A cross-section of 35 doctors at a special meeting in Vancouver Thursday night voiced proposals ranging from "do nothing" to "withdrawal of services" — a strike.

The meeting was called by the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons, the doctors' licencing body, to sample the mood of physicians on new powers granted Health Minister Ralph Loffmark this week.

An order-in-council made public Tuesday gives Loffmark the authority to grant, restrict or deny a doctor hospital privileges. This power had previously belonged to the board of each hospital which usually accepted the recommendation of a doctors' credentials committee.

Without hospital privileges, a doctor has no way to handle patients who require hospitalization other than referring them to another doctor who has privileges.

HYDRO NOT OPTIMISTIC

B.C. Hydro and Power Authority says the level of income reached with a $16 million profit last year can't be maintained—in the future because of steadily rising costs.

In its annual report released today, the provincial crown corporation revealed that increased sales of electricity to residential customers and increased electricity rates resulted in an $18 million increase in revenue from that source.

The report doesn't specify how much money Hydro can expect to make in the years ahead, except that it will be less than last year.

Premier Bennett said earlier this week that he doesn't see any further Hydro electricity rate increases as long as the utility can operate at a profit. Hydro lost $100,000 two years ago, prior to increasing its rates.

Bennett revealed Hydro's profit earlier this week.

Vancouver Police 'Unable' To Control Drug Abuse

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chief Constable John Fisk said Thursday the police force can do little to fight Vancouver's increasing drug addiction problem.

He told the city police commission the force can only help control the situation and act as a limited deterrent.

"We must look to our sociologists and medical people and others in related fields to take the kind of action necessary to combat the causes and effects of this major social problem," Chief Fisk said.

In a statement to the commission, he said he felt it timely to comment on the drug problem in Vancouver in view of recent developments.

He said Vancouver's history of hard drug abuse dates back to the turn of the century, with the smoking of opium by a few Chinese immigrants.

ACTIVITIES KNOWN

He said their activities were known, that the practice was apparently not considered to be a threat to the health of the community at that time.

"However," Chief Fisk added, "it would appear that within a few years there was an increased demand for more refined drugs.

"Since that time, Vancouver has been faced with a major hard drug problem.

"By 1950, the number of heroin addicts in Vancouver was estimated at 500 and at this time it is estimated that there are some 4,000 hard drug addicts in Vancouver."

Chief Fisk said trends for the first half of 1971 indicate there will probably be about 600 persons arrested for possession of heroin by the end of the year, compared with 383 last year.

"The distribution of hard drugs in Vancouver is controlled by several highly-organized groups with connections for the most part in eastern Canada," the police chief said.

"Some four or five years ago the introduction of soft drugs to the local scene added considerably to our total drug problem.

"The number of persons arrested and charged with possession and trafficking in soft drugs has accelerated rapidly over the past few years and is an indication of the growth of the problem."

If present trends continue, the chief said, close to 1,200 persons will have been arrested by the end of the year for possession of soft drugs compared to only 198 four years ago.

He said continued enforcement has resulted in a considerable number of arrests but repeated that enforcement alone could not solve the problem.

PRIVATE DRUG USER 'PAYING A PREMIUM'

TORONTO (CP) — Consumers who pay privately for prescription drugs shouldn't have to pay more than those who receive drugs from hospital and government sources, says the Commission on Pharmaceutical Services.

"We think the prices to consumers who buy privately should be lower in many cases," a spokesman for the commission said today.

He cited the tranquillizer valium, which hospitals and governments get free, but which costs the consumer $8.44 per 100 capsules if he buys it in a drug store.

In a 500-page report released Thursday, the commission says the consumer who pays privately is in effect subsidizing the one who receives drugs from hospital and government sources.

(The value of prescription drugs dispensed has risen from $30 million a year in 1940 to $300 million in 1970).

The recommendation is one of 97 included in the report by the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association which sponsored the three-year study at a cost of $160,000.

The eight-member commission was headed by John B. Macdonald, executive director of the Council of Ontario Universities and formerly president of the University of British Columbia.

The report stated there had been a decline of more than 200 in the number of pharmacies in Canada between 1962 and 1969, with Ontario showing the greatest drop.

If the trend continues, the report said, more communities will be left without the services of a pharmacy "which could impede the availability of drugs to the public."

The report also said that advertising of prescription services and prices reduces the dispensing of prescription drugs to a merchandising basis and "tends to eventually lower the standards of the service both quantitatively and qualitatively."

The commission recommended

- Compulsory continuing education for pharmacists as a condition for retaining a licence.
- Stringent regulations governing pharmacy licences throughout Canada to ensure that policies and practices reflect the public interest.
- Exclusion of ownership of a pharmacy by a physician or the licensing of a physician as a pharmaceutical chemist.
- Physical separation within a drug store of the area in which drugs are dispensed.
- Continuing study of manpower requirements because of rising demands, an aging population of retail pharmacists and the entry of more women into the field.

Apollo Pair Heading For Moon Adventure

HOUSTON (AP) — After one abortive separation attempt, two Apollo 15 astronauts successfully cast off their lunar module Falcon from the command ship today and headed for man's riskiest moon landing in a boulder-strewn basin ringed by 15,000-foot mountains and a gaping canyon.

"Good clean sep," Commander David R. Scott reported as the two ships moved apart.

"You're on your own," Alfred M. Worden told Scott and James B. Irwin as they drifted away.

Until the second attempt was successful there was high drama and tension for more than 20 minutes as the two spaceships circled the moon.

But when they came around the edge of the moon the ships were still locked firmly nose-to-nose.

"Houston, this is Falcon. We did not get a separation," Commander Scott announced.

NO ELECTRICITY

Mission Control immediately calculated that the docking probe had not received the electrical power needed to unlatch.

Worden removed a hatch and climbed into the connecting tunnel between the two craft. He reported the electrical umbilical cord was

B.C. TEL RATE HIKE APPROVED

OTTAWA (CP) — The British Columbia Telephone Co. has obtained permission from the Canadian transport commission to raise basic monthly subscriber rates by 2.5 per cent for all services except multi-party lines.

This increase, which would mean $1.4 million more in revenue in 1972, is more than 10 per cent less than was requested by B.C. Telephones. It applies to individual and two-party lines effective Sept. 1.

The commission in its decision released this afternoon also said rates have been approved for other services which would yield another $8 million in 1972.

French Crash Claims 37

PAU, France (AP) — A French air force transport plane caught fire and crashed in flames today killing 37 persons aboard, including 30 paratroop officers, air force headquarters reported.

The plane, a twin-engine Nord 2501, went down just as the troops were about to begin a jump exercise, the communique said.

"According to the first reports, fire broke out on board and the aircraft, after requesting priority to land, crashed trying to reach the airfield."

Listed as dead are 30 officers, four jump masters and three members of the flight crew.

Under the directive, visits between prisoners and their families on evenings, weekends and statutory holidays are to be encouraged. Opportunity will be provided for families to participate more frequenty in such activities as church services, graduation ceremonies and sports events.

N-TEST BACKED AS QUAKE HITS

Times News Services

A moderate earthquake was recorded this morning in the vicinity of Amchitka Island in the Aleutians, it was reported by the Palmer Observatory in Alaska.

And in Washington the U.S. Congress Thursday night rejected an effort to block a five-megaton underground nuclear test scheduled for this fall on Amchitka.

The blast is to test the warhead of the Safeguard Spartan anti-missile system.

An observatory spokesman said the quake registered 5.3 on the Richter scale and was centred at Shemya Island, about 250 miles from Amchitak.

There were no reports of damage or injury.

Opponents of the Amchitka test claim the explosion of the large nuclear device could trigger a major earthquake causing devastation on the west coast of Canada and the United States and the islands of Hawaii.

Logging Curbs Extended

Partial curtailment of logging and other industrial activity was extended at midnight Thursday to include all of Vancouver forest district and most of Prince Rupert district.

B.C. Forest Service has imposed early shift requirements in the two districts, in which many logging operators were already shut down because of extreme fire hazard.

The latest order applies to all of Prince Rupert district except for the Stikine River basin and Yukon border.

With 32 new outbreaks of fire, there are now 157 blazes, two of them out of control as wind and lighting continue to frustrate firefighting efforts by 802 men, 42 bulldozers and 24 air tankers.

The worst fire, covering more than 120,000 acres in Prince George forest district north of Fort Nelson, was buffeted by winds up to 35 miles an hour, and remains uncontrolled.

That outbreak, and a 22,000-acre fire near Ingenika River northwest of Lake Williston, are burning largely in brush and scrub.

Lightning strikes account for many fires, especially in Prince Rupert and Kamloops districts, the forest service said. There are no fires on Vancouver Island.

Nixon Welcome But . . .

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said today Chinese leaders told him that unless President Nixon is prepared to make significant concessions there could hardly be any beneficial results from his trip to Peking.

Stanfield was talking to reporters on his arrival here after a six-day visit to China, during which he met acting Foreign Minister Chi Peng-fei and Kuo Mo-jo, vice-chairman of the National People's Congress, China's parliament.

The Progressive Conservative party leader said both officials outlined at considerable length and force China's position on relations with the United States.

"It was emphasized to me that President Nixon would be welcome to visit Peking, but unless he is prepared to make significant concessions, there would hardly be any beneficial results from the visit," he said.

Stanfield said the Chinese placed great emphasis on the question of Taiwan, home of 14 million Nationalist Chinese, which Peking has pledged to "liberate."

Ferry Talks Set

Union and management were meeting today to try to iron out a dispute at B.C. Ferries.

Strike votes, distributed earlier this week by the marine branch (unlicensed) of the B.C. Government Employees Union to its 1,600 members, were to be counted later today.

Norman Thornber, business agent for the marine branch, said the meeting was arranged after management said "they are prepared to meet at our convenience."

Ferry workers are objecting to regulations issued April 17 which the union said lump absenteeism of all kinds, including leaves of absence and days off without pay, in with sick leave.

Two hundred workers have received letters saying 'they coul' be fired if they are absent in the next six months, the union said.

Welfare Cheques Counterfeit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police arrested 10 persons Thursday after scores of counterfeit $95 city welfare cheques were cashed at banks, supermarkets, department stores and hotels in what police and welfare authorities described as a tightly-organized operation.

Harcourt McLean, assistant director of the Vancouver social welfare department, said 40 of the cheques were presented at one bank branch alone. There is no estimate of the number of phoney cheques still uncashed he said.

He described them as almost-perfect counterfeits, except for the fact that all carried the same serial number—242453—and were dated July 29. The regular welfare cheques this week were all dated July 28.

Mr. McLean said persons cashing the cheques presented false welfare department identification cards.

Police said one of the men arrested carried written instructions to cash the cheques before banks opened at 10 a.m. and police said they were working on theassumpt ion that one ing on the assumption that one thing.

The first arrests were made after a cashier at a department store became suspicious when she noticed the identical serial numbers on two cheques presented for cashing. The cashier contacted Mr. McLean, who informed police.

Borrowing Approved

School district borrowing totalling $7 million has been approved by the provincial government.

Of the total, $300,000 is allocated to the Greater Victoria school district. The interest rate on the bonds is 7.08 per cent.

The cabinet also approved $10 million in Pacific Great Eastern railway borrowing at an interest rate not to exceed 7.66 per cent.

After the two ships manoeuvred to the proper attitude, Mission Control gave the go-ahead for undocking.

Worden pushed a button and the manoeuvre was successful.

That was 25 minutes after the original separation try. Had the manoeuvre been delayed another 15 minutes, the astronauts probably would have had to change their landing time because of a shortage of time to check all systems properly. But Mission Control reported that time remained right on schedule.

The moon-circling astronauts earlier beamed to earth a striking televised picture of the landing site and then boosted their ship into a slightly higher orbit to help assure a pinpint landing.

As Apollo 15 zipped within 30,000 feet of the peaks of the Apennines, television viewsers caught a brief climpse of the rugged terrain and knew why the landing attempt would be tricky. The site is pocked with craters and larger boulders.

Scott said that despite the rough appearance, he spotted many areas smooth enough for a touchdown.

trar of the college, said from Vancouver today that out of Thursday night's meeting has come a decision to call an emergency meeting of the council of the college, 11 members elected from districts. It will be held in Vancouver Aug. 7.

The council in turn may decide to call an emergency meeting of British Columbia's 3,300 doctors. Or it might decide to let the issue rest until the college's annual meeting in October, said McClure.

CATCH MOOD

At the Thursday night meeting, which he said was to catch the mood of doctors by tapping a cross-section, opinions on what action to take ranged from ultra-conservative to radical — "from we should do nothing to we should withdraw our services."

The B.C. division of the Canadian Medical Association announced earlier that it will hold an emergency meeting in Vancouver Aug. 6. The Victoria Medical Society, representing close to 300 local doctors, will meet Tuesday to instruct its delegates attending that meeting.

Loffmark has claimed he will use his new powers to effect a better distribution of new doctors throughout the province, countering their concentration in Vancouver, Victoria and the Okanagan.

McClure denied today there is a general or significant doctor shortage in remote parts of the province.

"Distribution has improved markedly during the past five years . . . and there has been no great clamor coming out of those communities."

There have been a few "hot spots" but these are communities where there are barely enough people and no facilities to attract a doctor, he said.

Meanwhile, a heart surgery specialist who was denied access to cardiac facilities at Vancouver General Hospital said Thursday Loffmark had his case in mind when he took on his new powers.

Dr. George Stefanik, who applied two years ago to join the open-heart surgery team at the hospital, said the health minister's new authority is aimed at breaking the cliques that control surgeries in major hospitals.

Rumour had been rife in medical circles that the case was a factor in Loffmark's move but the health minister insists that he does not plan to use his new powers to get hospital privileges for doctors who are now denied them.

He said the priority is to restrict hospital privileges in major urban centres in order to persuade more doctors to set up practice in more remote areas.

But the credentials committee, a group of doctors reporting on applications for hospital privileges to the hospital board is apparently already doing this in the case of the Vancouver General. There is a waiting list of 32 doctors.

There are now 741 doctors with privileges at that hospital and the number is being curtailed because it is already administratively unwieldy.

sponsored by the Yoshiwara Bereaved Family Association, composed of relatives of soldiers killed in the Second World War.

All Nippon Airways said it received an emergency signal from the airliner and then contact was lost.

A military spokesman said the fighter broke into pieces, but the pilot, a sergeant, managed to bail out. He was taken to a hospital and was found to be uninjured, the spokesman said.

The pilot of a fighter in the area reported that he saw the two planes plunging toward the earth from an altitude of about 26,000 feet. He said they were trailing smoke and then disappeared.

A schoolteacher near the crash area reported a plane flew over streaking white smoke and then he heard what sounded like a "thunder burst." Moments later he saw a "rain of debris" falling on a nearby mountain.

Officials of the airline said the weather was clear at the time.

It was Japan's second airline crash this month. On July 3, a locally-built YS-11 of the Japanese TOA Airlines crashed into a mountain in the northern part of the country, killing all 68 persons aboard.

The world's worst previous aviation disaster was the crash of a Venezuelan DC-9 jetliner March 16, 1969, off Maracaibo, in which 155 persons were killed.

Japan's worst previous crash occurred Feb. 4, 1966, when another All Nippon Boeing 727 crashed into Tokyo Bay, killing 133 persons. In the next month two other airliners—one flown by Canadian Pacific Airlines and one by British Overseas Airways Corp.—crashed in the Tokyo area, bringing the toll within 31 days to 321 dead.

Beer Imports Allowed In Strike-Lockout

First shipments of bottled beer from outside the province began arriving in mainland B.C. areas this weekend to help offset the strike-lockout of breweries in Vancouver.

Liquor Control Board chairman William Bruce said today he expects some shipments might arrive in lower mainland areas Saturday, depending on shipping speeds.

The beer is being imported on provincial government orders from Uncle Ben's brewery in Winnipeg, Carlings in Calgary and Edmonton, and the Olympia brewery in the state of Washington.

Bruce said the beer will be used to keep Liquor Control Board outlets stocked. It would have little or no effect on mainland taverns staggered by the shortage.

BOTTLED BEER

Government action began Thursday when an order-in-council gave Prince George brewer Ben Ginter clearance to bring in bottled beer from his Winnipeg brewery or from the U.S., if necessary.

Ginter expects 60,000 cases to arrive in B.C. Monday morning and he has made provision for an additional 20,000 to arrive each day thereafter until the strike-lockout concludes.

"The LCB haven't asked for draught," he said today. "If they had, there would be 150,000 gallons on the way from Manitoba by now."

A spokesman for the Vancouver Beverage Dispensers Union in Vancouver says his group was not striking against the public and welcomes the idea of importing beer.

About 300 union members are laid off as a result of a Brewery and Soft Drink Workers union strike at Labatt brewery in New Westminster on July 19. Molsons in Vancouver locked out 109 members of the same local the next day.

Locally only three hotels have been affected by the shortage and they are all attempting to remain open.

Goldstream Inn ran out of draught Thursday night and a spokesman said hours will be staggered as long as supplies last, although he had no idea of the hours involved at this stage.

"How long our supplies last depends on how much of our regular weekly order we receive next Thursday," he said.

Under an LCB directive parlors may not increase orders without a period of advance warning, but he said it's quite conceivable to receive less than the amount ordered because of the strike.

The Kings Hotel ran out of draught Tuesday and has gone on staggered hours (10 a.m. to 6 p.m.) hoping to last it out.

Farmer Bids Low

Farmer Construction of Victoria had the lowest bid of three opened Thursday at 4 p.m. by the Capital Region's hospital board for the addition of 20 beds and other work at the Lady Minto Hospital, Ganges.

The company's base bid was $238,400. It also presented a total tender of $304,566 which would cover the additional rooms, a new road, a parking lot, changes in transformer, plumbing and electrical facilities and construction of an elevator.

The total bid was slightly under the architect's estimate of $305,000.

Other tenders were submitted by Cana Construction and Condor Construction.
